POLITICAL PARTICIPATION IN BEIJING

TIANJIAN SHI

In this first scientific survey of political participation in the People's Republic of China, Tianjian Shi identifies twenty-eight participatory acts and groups them into seven areas: voting, campaign activities, appeals, adversarial activities, cronyism, resistance, and boycotts. What he finds will surprise many observers. In a society where communication channels are controlled by the government, access to information from unofficial means becomes the single most important determinant for people's engaging in participatory acts. Beijing citizens actively engage in various voluntary participatory acts to articulate their interests.

THE TAMING OF THE SAMURAI

Honorific Individualism and the Making of Modern Japan

EIKO IKEGAMI

"This book has already been widely praised by prominent American political scientists and historians for answering how the Japanese achieved modernity without traveling the route taken by Western countries. At once a remarkable historical study of the samurai warrior class from its ancient origins to its transformation under the Tokugawa regime and a comparative study that makes Japan available for analysis alongside other great instances of state formation... Beautifully written. It will undoubtedly become standard reading in universities around the world." —FOREIGN AFFAIRS

JAPAN'S POLITICAL MARKETPLACE

J. MARK RAMSEYER AND FRANCES McCALL ROSENBLUTH

WITH A NEW PREFACE

"Ramseyer and Rosenbluth present a view of Japanese politics that coherently links voters, politicians, bureaucrats, and judges into patterns of interaction governed by the logic of the 'political marketplace.' They succeed in demonstrating that many of the analytical tools developed to study the politics of advanced Western democracies are not only applicable in the Japanese context, but also are capable of yielding novel interpretations of politics in Japan." —Amy Searight, PACIFIC AFFAIRS

CHINA REPORT

A Journal of East Asian Studies

Editor

MANORANJAN MOHANTY

Examining in particular, various aspects and issues concerning Indo-Chinese relations, China Report has been an indispensable source of information on China, its society and culture.

China Report encourages free expression and discussion of different ideas, approaches and viewpoints and tries to provide a fresh approach which goes beyond the strictly utilitarian area studies without becoming antiquarian. The journal contains discussions on other East Asian countries and their relationships with China and covers inter-related subject areas—Economics, History, International Relations, Law, Politics and Sociology.

The journal is published quarterly in February, May, August and November.
