

Number Three in Butterworths African Law Series

KERR'S

NATIVE LAW OF SUCCESSION

IN SOUTH AFRICA

By A. J. KERR, B.A., LL.M., Advocate of the Supreme Court of South Africa; Senior Lecturer in Law in Rhodes University.

35s. net, postage extra.

South African law is confusing, not only to outsiders, but to residents of the country. The chief difficulties arise from the fact that different systems of law exist side by side, changes in society often causing problems as to which system to use. Some of the most important of these conflicts are to be seen in the law of Succession, for there is a lack of reconciliation between native law and general law on this subject.

This new work is the first of its kind, and in it Mr. Kerr has discussed all these problems, and the solutions to them adopted in South Africa. It covers all statutes of general application and the law of the Nguni tribes of the Cape and Natal in particular, providing a clear and detailed exposition of principle together with numerous references to, and quotations from, authority. It will be of the greatest assistance to judicial officers, administrators, legal practitioners and students. Tables of Cases and of Statutes allow quick and easy reference to authority.

BUTTERWORTHS, 88 Kingsway, London, W.C.2

Showroom: 11-12 Bell Yard, Temple Bar, W.C.2

Number Two in Butterworths African Law Series

HAYDON'S LAW AND JUSTICE IN BUGANDA

By E. S. HAYDON, B.A., of Gray's Inn, Barrister-at-Law, formerly Judicial Adviser, Buganda.

47s. 6d. net, postage extra.

“For the most part, Customary Law in Buganda is unwritten. Yet this part of the Law still greatly affects the rights and duties of our people. Written works, like this one, import into customary law that certainty and predictability necessary in any legal system . . .

“For the last sixty years the Kiganda customary law and English law have worked closely side by side to produce progress and peace of mind among our people. This is a very good indication that the two systems are not repugnant but complementary to each other. The result of the interaction of the Kiganda customary law and English law must be as clearly ascertained as possible. This book happily reveals that the issue of marriage between the two systems, which are compatible but yet unlike in various instances, has been, and is likely to continue to be, at least satisfactory.

“Mr. Haydon's application and scholarship throw an exceptionally bright beam of light on 'the development of Buganda Customary Law and the Buganda judicial institutions from the middle of the last century until the present day', to quote the author himself. I am glad to be able to say that this book will be very useful to the legal profession, the lay reader and research students.”

Excerpts from the Foreword by J. P. MUSOKE, Minister of Justice in the Government of His Highness the Kabaka of Buganda.

BUTTERWORTHS, 88 Kingsway, London, W.C.2

Showroom: 11-12 Bell Yard, Temple Bar, W.C.2