

DIGITAL HARDWARE PROCESSING OF ROTATIONAL SYNTHESIS DATA

R.H. Frater
School of Electrical Engineering,
Sydney University, Australia.

ABSTRACT

Digital techniques for the direct transformation of rotational synthesis data are discussed with particular emphasis on current cost and technological limits. A prototype system designed to test various approaches will be described and its application to "clean" and maximum entropy reconstructions considered.