

Acknowledgments

I would like to thank, first and foremost, my PhD supervisor, Claus Beisbart, for invaluable guidance and unceasing support since my ideas on moral underdetermination began to take shape in the form of my MA thesis. Without his countless suggestions and remarks, this book would not have been possible. My thanks also go to the following people:

My second supervisor, Gerhard Ernst, for highly insightful and always encouraging comments on several occasions in Erlangen and Berne.

Christian List for enormously helpful feedback on several occasions, for hosting me at LSE, and for continuing support throughout the years.

Georg Brun, Tanja Rechnitzer, and many changing members of the Reflective Equilibrium Jour Fixe at the Institute of Philosophy in Berne, for many challenging discussions, as well as some most valuable suggestions on how to navigate the roads of academic philosophy.

Jamie Dreier, Brad Hooker, and Philip Stratton-Lake for hosting me during two research visits, taking the time to read drafts, and recommending many additional topics to consider. I remember very fondly how I met Philip for the first time and he asked me a lot of seemingly simple questions that opened my eyes about all the issues I had not thought through sufficiently.

In addition, my sincere gratitude goes to Christoph Baumberger, Monika Betzler, Susanne Boshammer, Christian Budnik, Matthias Egg, Jörg Löschke, Adriano Mannino, Michel Meliopoulos, Lukas Nägeli, Korbinian Rieger, Peter Schaber, Jussi Suikkanen, Folke Tersman, Jonas Vandieken, Laura Valentini, Silvan Wittwer, and some people I have undoubtedly forgotten for enlightening comments on drafts and papers.

I have had the pleasure to present parts of the book at conferences and in front of reading groups and seminars in Berne, Cologne, Edinburgh, Erlangen, Manchester, Munich, Osnabrück, Singapore, Southampton, Stockholm, Utrecht, and Zurich. I want to thank the audiences for their always constructive and amicable discussions and the organizers for making these very enjoyable occasions possible.

My sincere thanks also go to Hilary Gaskin for patient support, two very perceptive referees for Cambridge University Press, and several anonymous journal referees, who have often gone way beyond what is required and helped me avoid countless mistakes.

I am grateful to the Swiss National Science Foundation for a generous, four-year full-time grant during my PhD, as well as two mobility grants for research visits at Brown and Reading Universities. The open access publication of this book has been published with the support of the Swiss National Science Foundation.

Finally, my eternal gratitude goes to my wife, who has put up with this for what feels almost as long, and our adorable boys, without whom none of this matters.
