

Association News

Association Officers and Council Members Nominated for 1997-98

The 1997 Nominating committee composed of Tracey B. Strong, chair, University of California-San Diego; John Aldrich, Duke University; Linda Brady, Georgia Tech University; F. Chris Garcia, University of New Mexico; Marilyn Hoskins, University of New Hampshire; and Don Kommers, Notre Dame University, have proposed the following slate of Association Officers and Council members.

Members of the Association have an opportunity to meet the nominees at a special gathering on Thursday, August 31 at 12:30 p.m. as part of the 1997 Annual Meeting in Washington, DC.

President-Elect (1997-98): Matthew Holden Jr., University of Virginia

Matthew Holden, Jr. is the Henry L. and Grace M. Doherty Professor of Government and Foreign Affairs at the University of Virginia. In 1996 he was the Newman Visiting Professor of American Civilization at Cornell University.

Previously, he taught at Wayne State University, the University of Pittsburgh, and the University of Wisconsin-Madison. He has been a visiting faculty member at the University of Vermont. He was also a Research Associate, Institute of Government and Public Affairs, University of Illinois, Staff Consultant, Cuyahoga County, Charter Commission, Cleveland, Ohio (1959), Research Assistant on Government Organization, Cleveland Metropolitan Services Commission (METRO), and Ohio Legislative Service Commission. In 1992, he lectured on political and constitutional issues in South Africa, Mozambique and Tanzania.

He attended the University of Chicago, 1946-1950, graduated from Roosevelt University (political science, with history minor) and received his advanced degrees from Northwestern University, (M.A., 1956, Ph.D., 1961.) in Political Science. Holden served in the U.S. Army, 1955-1957, being assigned to Artillery (Korea, 1956-57).

His major field is American politics, with primary focus on executive politics and public administration, and his interests contain a strong connection to international relations and comparative politics (Britain and Africa). His published writing includes some ten books and specialized monographs including Continuity & Disruption: Essays in Public Administration (University of Pittsburgh Press, 1996), The Divisible Republic (Abelard-Schuman, 1973), Pollution Control as Bargaining Process (Cornell Water Resources Center, 1966), and as co-author, Resources and Decisions (Duxbury, 1975).

Holden has also published more than fifty papers in various fields of politics dealing with American politics (both the Presidency and Congress), public administration and public policy, politics and law, ethnicity and race relations, decision-making, and the discovery of questions for political inquiry.

His present research program focuses principally on a political theory of administration and on the politics of economic organization.

Holden was editor of the National Political Science Review, 1991-1994, in which capacity he edited The Challenge to Racial Stratification, (Volume 4: National Political Science) and The Changing Racial Regime (Volume 5). He is at present on the editorial board of Policy Studies Journal, and previously served on editorial boards of American Political Science Review, American Behavioral Scientist, American Political Quarterly, Ethnicity, Journal of Politics, Sage Yearbooks on Public Policy, and Policy Analysis.

Holden was a Vice President of the American Political Science Association, a Chair of the Election Committee, a member of the first Ethics Committee of the Association, member and chair of the Ralph Bunche Award Committee, and was a member of the APSA Managing Editor Search Committee. He has twice been chair of the public administration division of the Annual Meeting, and was Program Chair in 1986 during the presidency of Aaron Wildavsky. Holden was also a member of the Council of the Midwest Political Science Association, and in 1995 was the Chair of the V. O. Key Award Committee in the Southern Political Science Association.

Holden was President of the Policy Studies Organization and is a member of the National Academy of Public Administration.

Holden's activity has extended beyond the academy in his service as Commissioner, Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (1977-1981), as Commissioner, Public Service Commission of Wisconsin (1975-1977), and as a member of the President's Air Quality Advisory Board, 1972–1974. At present he is a member of the Electric System Reliability Task Force appointed by the Secretary of Energy. His interests also include ecclesiastical governance, with which he has experience since 1989, and corporate governance, with which he has had working relationships since 1981.

Matthew Holden, Jr.

Vice President (1997–98):
Rodolfo O. de la Garza,
University of Texas at Austin

Rodolfo O. de la Garza is Mike Hogg Professor of Community Affairs in the Department of Government at the University of Texas in Austin and Vice President of Tomás Rivera Policy Institute. A native of Tucson, he completed his Ph.D. at the University of Arizona in 1972 and has taught at UT-Austin since 1980.

de la Garza has an outstanding record as a teacher, researcher and author. He has been recognized for distinguished teaching by the Colorado College and by the College of Liberal Arts at the University of Texas. He has lectured at colleges and universities across the nation and Mexico; and he was Visiting Professor at the John F. Kennedy

Rodolfo O. de la Garza

School of Government and the Department of Government of Harvard University and was a Canterbury Fellow at Christchurch University in New Zealand.

As a researcher and author, he directed the Latino National Political Survey, the first national survey of Latino political life. He was Chair of the Inter-University Program for Latino Research/Social Science Council Joint Committee on Hispanic Research and has served on the editorial board of numerous scholarly journals. He continues to direct an on-going examination of Latino political involvement that has resulted in a five volume series on Hispanic public opinion and political participation. The most recent of these is Ethnic Ironies, (Westview 1996 with Louis DeSipio). He is also currently Principal Investigator of a study examining the role that Hispanic diasporas play in U.S.-Latin American relations. Additionally, he has published extensively on Latino political behavior, U.S.-Mexico relations and immigration in scholarly journals and books. His research has been supported by the Ford, Rockefeller, Tinker, Spencer and Mellon Foundations.

Long active in professional associations, de la Garza was a founding member of the National Association of Chicano Studies and of the Inter-University Program for Latino Research. He has served on the Councils of the American Political Science Association and the Western Political Science Association, and the APSA Committee on the Status of Latinos. He is currently a member of the Council on Foreign Relations and of the Hispanic Council on International Affairs. In 1993, de la Garza received the Lifetime Achievement Award of the Committee on the Status of Latinos in the Profession of the American Political Science Association.

Vice President (1997–98):
Jennifer Hochschild,
Princeton University

Jennifer L. Hochschild is a Professor of Politics and Public Affairs at Princeton University, with a joint appointment in the Department of Politics and the Woodrow Wilson

Jennifer Hochschild

School of Public and International Affairs. She received a B.A. from Oberlin College in 1971 and a Ph.D. from Yale University in 1979. She taught at Duke University and Columbia University before coming to Princeton. She has been a Fellow at the Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences, and was twice a Visitor at the Institute for Advanced Study. She has received awards or research support from the American Philosophical Society, the Spencer Foundation, the American Political Science Association, the Princeton University Research Board, and other organizations. She has also served as a consultant or expert witness in several school desegregation cases, most recently the on-going case of Yonkers Board of Education v. New York State. She is the author of Facing Up to the American Dream: Race, Class, and the Soul of the Nation (Princeton University Press, 1995); The New American Dilemma: Liberal Democracy and School Desegregation (Yale University Press, 1984); What's Fair: American Beliefs about Distributive Justice (Harvard University Press, 1981). She is a co-editor of Social Policies for Children (Brookings Institution Press, 1995). She has also written a variety of articles in the fields of political philosophy, American political thought, public opinion, and race in America. She is currently writing a book on lessons to be learned from the history of school and housing desegregation in Yonkers, New York. She is a Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and served as co-chair of the Program Committee for the annual convention of the American Political Science Association in 1996.

Vice President (1997–98):
Robert D. Putnam,
Harvard University

Robert D. Putnam is the Stanfield Professor of International Peace at Harvard University. He has served as chairman of Harvard's Department of Government, Director of the Center for International Affairs, and Dean of the Kennedy School of Government. He is the author or co-author of seven books and more than thirty scholarly articles published in ten languages, including Making Democracy Work: Civic Traditions in Modern Italy (1993); Double-Edged Diplomacy: International

Robert Putnam

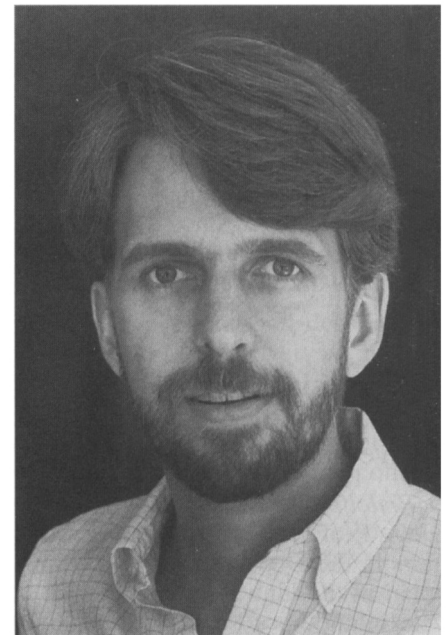

Bargaining and Domestic Politics (1993); Hanging Together: The Seven-Power Summits (1984); Bureaucrats and Politicians in Western Democracies (1981); Comparative Study of Political Elites (1976); and Beliefs of Politicians (1973). Putnam was educated at Swarthmore College, Balliol College, Oxford, and Yale University, and has received honorary degrees from Swarthmore and Stockholm University. He has taught at the University of Michigan and served on the staff of the National Security Council. His current research on American democracy will appear in a forthcoming book, “Bowling Alone: Civic Disengagement in America and What To Do About It.”

Treasurer (1997–99): Timothy
Cook, Williams College

Timothy E. Cook is the Fairleigh Dickinson, Jr., Professor of Political Science at Williams College, where he has taught since 1981. Cook was the first occupant of the Laurence Lombard chair as visiting associate professor at the Joan Shorenstein Center on the Press, Politics and Public Policy at the Kennedy School of Government at Harvard in 1989–90. He continues to serve as Associate of the Shorenstein Center. He also was a visiting professor in the political science department at Yale in the spring of 1995.

Cook received his B.A. in 1976 from Pomona College and his Ph.D. in political science from the University of Wisconsin in 1982. An American Political Science Association Congressional Fellow and a Guest Scholar at the Brookings Institution in 1984–85, he is the author of Making Laws and Making News: Media Strategies in the U.S. House of Representatives (Brookings Institution, 1989). Cook was also part of a six-person team that received grants from numerous foundations to study the 1992 presidential campaign as it unfolded in four different sites around the country. The team published their findings in a book released in the spring of 1996, Crosstalk: Citizens, Candidates, and Media in a Presidential Campaign (University of Chicago Press, 1996). His next book, Governing with the News: The News Media as a Political Institution will be published by the University of Chicago Press in the fall of 1997. He has also written widely on political communication in the United States, political socialization and representation in Congress in many anthologies and major political science journals. Cook currently serves on the editorial boards of Political Communication and the Harvard International Journal of Press/Politics.

Timothy Cook

Within the Association, Cook served as a founding member both of the Lesbian and Gay Caucus and of the Political Communication Section. He has been an officer of the Political Communication Section, chair of the McWilliams award committee, and served a two-year term on the APSA Council in 1994–96.

Secretary (1997–98): Toni-Michelle C. Travis, George Mason University

Toni-Michelle C. Travis is an associate professor of Government and

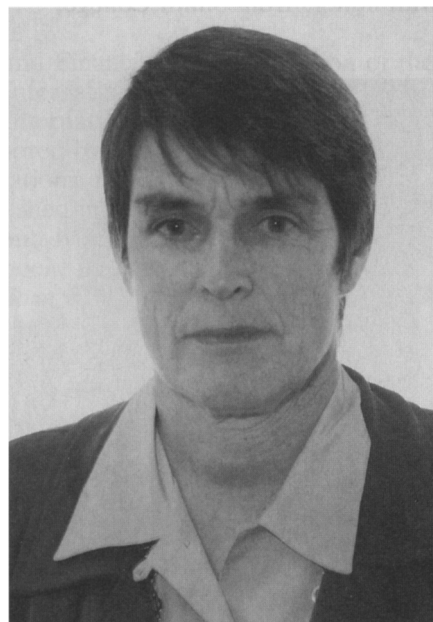

Toni-Michelle C. Travis

Politics at George Mason University where she teaches American government and interdisciplinary courses on race and gender. Publications include: "Boston: the Unfinished Agenda" in Race, Class and Cities, Rufus Browning, Dale Rogers Marshall and David Tabb, editors (1990); "Women as an Emerging Power Bloc: Ethnic and Racial Considerations" in Ethnicity and Women, edited by Winston A. Van Horne (1986), and "Double Consciousness and The Politics of the Elite" in W.E.B. DuBois: The Scholar As Activist edited by Rutledge M. Dennis, (1996). In 1996 she published The Meaning of Difference with Karen Rosenblum. She serves on the editorial board of Women and Politics, as general editor for the Garland series on Race and Politics, and as editor of the forthcoming 1996 conference issue of the Journal of Urban Affairs. As a political analyst on Virginia politics Travis has been quoted in the New York Times, Washington Post, and Richmond Times-Dispatch and appeared on C-Span, CNN, as well as local network and cable television stations. Within the APSA she has served on the Council, the Committee on the Status of Women, and the Committee on the Status of Blacks. She is past president of the Women's Caucus, co-founded the section on Race, Ethnicity, and Politics, and served as Chair for the Race, Gender and Ethnicity Division of the 1995 APSA meeting. In the profession she has served as president of the National Capital Area Political Science Association and as chair of the Committee on the Status of Blacks of the Southern Political Science Association.

Council (1997–99): Jane H. Bayes, California State University-Northridge

Jane H. Bayes is a Professor of Political Science at California State University, Northridge where she has been since 1968. Her fields of emphasis are Women and Politics, Po-his B.S. and Ph.D. from the California Institute of Technology, he served on the faculty of the Department of Government at the University of Texas at Austin from 1982–87. He has also held visiting appointments in the Department of Political Science and the School of Business at Washington University in St. Louis (1984–86).

Jane H. Bayes

Cox is author of The Efficient Secret, which won the Samuel H. Beer dissertation prize in 1983, coauthor of Legislative Leviathan, which won the Richard F. Fenno Prize in 1994, and author of Making Votes Count: Strategic Coordination in the World's Electoral Systems (1997). His current research includes various investigations of Japanese electoral politics and a book project on the political consequences of the reapportionment revolution in the United States.

Cox currently serves on the Board of Overseers of the National Elections Studies. A former Guggenheim Fellow, he was elected to the American Academy of Arts and Sciences in 1996.

Council (1997–99): Charles D. Hadley, University of New Orleans

Charles D. Hadley is Research Professor of Political Science at the University of New Orleans. Hadley, Editor of The American Review of Politics, is a former President of the

Charles D. Hadley

litical Economy, and Minority Politics. She was President of the Western Political Science Association from 1996–97, and was the Chair of the International Political Science Association's Research Committee on Sex Roles and Politics from 1989 to 1991. She is on the editorial board of Women & Politics. She holds a BA from Smith College and did her graduate work at the University of California, Los Angeles.

Council (1997–99): Gary W. Cox, University of California-San Diego

Gary W. Cox is Professor of Political Science at the University of California, San Diego. After receiving

Gary W. Cox

Southern Political Science Association and former Secretary-Treasurer of the APSA Section on Political Organizations & Parties (POP).

He teaches undergraduate and graduate courses on American Politics, American Political Parties, and Southern Politics. He received his B.A., 1964, and M.A., 1967, in political science from the University of Massachusetts—Amherst and Ph.D., 1971, in political science from the University of Connecticut. He has taught political science at the University of New Orleans since 1970 and at the University of Innsbruck, Austria, in 1987 as a Visiting Professor. He has lectured in Austria, Belgium, the Federal Republic of Germany, and the Republic of Ireland.

His published research includes Political Parties and Political Issues: Patterns of Differentiation Since the New Deal and Transformations of the American Party System: Political Coalitions from the New Deal to the 1970s (a Book of the Month Club selection in its 1st edition), both co-authored with Everett C. Ladd, Jr. He also has co-edited Political Parties in the Southern States: Party Activists in Partisan Coalitions and three volumes based on data collected for his National Science Foundation funded Southern Grassroots Party Activists Project (with Lewis Bowman): Southern State Party Organizations and Activists; Party Organization and Activists in the American South (forthcoming); and Party Activists in Southern Politics: Mirrors and Makers of Change (forthcoming). He has articles published in Public Opinion Quarterly, Journal of Politics, Western Political Quarterly, Polity, Social Science Quarterly, American Politics Quarterly, The American Review of Politics, Publius, Women & Politics, PS, State Government, The Public Interest, and other journals. He also has contributed numerous chapters to edited collections focused on presidential selection, presidential elections, and southern politics.

Among his awards and achievements are the Scholar Award from the South Central Region of The Honor Society of Phi Kappa Phi (1994); the Career Achievement Award for Excellence in Research from the University of New Orleans Alumni Association (1991); and a Younger Humanist Fellowship from the National Endowment for the Humanities (1973). He also was Phi Kappa Phi Scholar in Residence at Southeastern Louisiana University (1988).

Council (1997–99): Kristen Renwick Monroe, University of California-Irvine

Kristen Renwick Monroe is Professor of Politics and Associate Director of the Program in Political Psychology at the University of California at Irvine. She was graduated with honors from Smith College, where she spent her junior year in Geneva. Her M.A. and her Ph.D. are from the University of Chicago. She has taught at Princeton, New York University, SUNY-Stony Brook, and the University of British Columbia.

Kristen Renwick Monroe

Monroe's most recent book is The Heart of Altruism: Perceptions of a Common Humanity, published in 1996 by Princeton University Press and recently nominated for a Pulitzer Prize. She is the editor of The Political Process and Economic Change: A Critical Reassessment of the Theory of Rational Action (HarperCollins) and Contemporary Empiri- cal Political Theory, published by the University of California Press (1997).

In her current research Monroe continues to ask how political choices are influenced by how we see ourselves in relation to others. A book manuscript on moral choice during the Holocaust compares the acts and the cognitive frameworks of rescuers of Jews, bystanders and Nazis and tries to understand the psychology of genocide. Her work on altruism suggested that the critical variable is an altruistic perspective in which the altruist sees him or herself tied to others through the bonds of a common humanity. With genocide, the critical factor also appears to be psychological; neither blind anger nor rational calculus is as important as a subtle psychological process of distancing and dehumanization. Only when one's neighbor becomes "the other" does the unimaginable become possible.

Council (1997–98): Pippa Norris, Harvard University

Pippa Norris is Associate Director (Research) of the Joan Shorenstein Center on the Press, Politics and Public Policy, Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University and she lectures in Public Policy at the Kennedy School of Government.

She focuses on comparative political behaviour within the context of gender politics, elections, parties, and the media. Her books include Electoral Change Since 1945 (Blackwell 1997); Comparing Democracies: Elections and Voting in Global Perspective (Sage 1996); Women, Media and Politics (Oxford University Press 1997); Women in Politics (Oxford University Press 1996); Political Recruitment: Gender, Race, and Class in British Parliament (HarperCollins, 1994); Gender and Party Politics (Sage 1993); British Elections and Parties Yearbook (Harvester Wheatsheaf, annual 1991–3); British By-elections: The Volatile Electorate (Oxford University Press, 1990); and Politics and Sexual Equality (Harvester Wheatsheaf, 1987).

Books in press include Passages to Power: Legislative Recruitment in Advanced Democracies (Cambridge University Press, 1997), Elections and Voting Behaviour (Dartmouth, 1997), Politics and the Press: The News Media and its Influences (Lynne Rienner, 1997) and Britain Votes, 1997 (Oxford University Press, 1997).

Author of over ninety articles and chapters on comparative political behaviour she has also edited special issues of Parliamentary Affairs, the European Journal of Political Research, and the International Journal of Political Science. She co-founded the Elections, Parties and Public Opinion group of the PSA (EPOP). She has served on the Executive of the International Political Science Association, and the Political Science Association of the UK, as well as the editorial boards of Electoral Studies, Politics Review, The European Journal of Political Research, Political Communication, Representation, and Party Politics. She is co-founding editor of the Harvard International Journal of Press/Politics (MIT Press). She is co-director of the ESRC-funded British Election Study, 1997 and also the European Representation Study.

She holds a Bachelor of Arts in Politics and Philosophy from Warwick University, and Masters and Doctoral degrees in Politics from the London School of Economics (LSE). She has taught political science for almost twenty years, prior to Harvard at Edinburgh University, and held visiting fellowships at Columbia University, and the University of California, Berkeley.

Council (1997–99): Beth A. Simmons, University of California-Berkeley

Beth Simmons is a professor of political science at the University of California, Berkeley, specializing in international political economy and international law and institutions. Simmons is currently a Senior Fellow at the United States Institute of Peace in Washington DC, where she is conducting research on international law and the settlement of border and territorial disputes among states. Formerly on the faculty of Duke University, she spent 1995–1996 working in the Capital Markets and Financial Studies Division of the International Monetary Fund as an International Affairs Fellow, sponsored by the Council on Foreign Relations. Her work has been published in International Organization and World Politics, and in 1995 her book, Who Adjusts? Domestic Sources of Foreign Economic Policy During the Interwar Years, 1923–1938 (1994) was awarded the American Political Science Association's Woodrow Wilson Award for the best book published in the U.S. on government, politics, or international affairs and APSA's Section on Political Economy Award for the best book or article published in the past three years. She received her M.A. from the University of Chicago in international relations, studied international history on a Fulbright Scholarship at the London School of Economics and Political Science, and studied economic development at the University of the Philippines on a Rotary International post-graduate Fellowship. Simmons received her Ph.D. from Harvard University.

Beth A. Simmons

Council (1997–99): Joan Tronto, Hunter College, CUNY

Joan C. Tronto is a professor of political science at Hunter College and the Graduate School, City University of New York. She received her B.A. from Oberlin College and her M.A. and Ph.D. from Princeton University. Prior to teaching at Hunter, Tronto taught at Bowdoin College. In recent years, she has been a Research Fellow at the Institute for Human Sciences in Vienna, Austria and has served as a visiting professor at Yale University and at the University for Humanist Studies in Utrecht, the Netherlands.

Tronto's scholarly writings are in women and politics in the United States and in feminist political theory. She is one of the leading proponents of using care ethics as a basis for political theory, an argument expounded in her book, Moral Boundaries: A Political Argument for an Ethic of Care. A volume co-edited with Cathy Cohen and Kathy Jones will appear this year, Women Transforming Politics, that argues for expanding our usual definitions of which women and which activities constitute "women's political activity." In her current work, she considers the relationship of caring to democratic theory and practice. As a teacher, Tronto has taught Introduction to American Politics, Women and Politics, and Women and the Law in addition to a range of courses in the history of political thought, in contemporary feminist theory, and in women's studies. In 1991 she won the First Annual President's Award for Teaching Excellence at Hunter College.

Joan Tronto

Among her activities in the profession, Tronto has served on numerous award committees, including the Leo Strauss Award Committee and the Foundations of Political Thought First Book Prize Committee. She has also been active in the Women and Politics Organized Section, in the Women's Caucus for political science, and served as a Chair of the Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual Political Science Caucus. Tronto has also been active in women's studies and has served as Coordinator of the Women's Studies Program at Hunter College.

Council (1997–99): Michael Wallerstein, Northwestern University

Michael Wallerstein is professor of Political Science at Northwestern University. Wallerstein received his B.A. from Stanford University in 1974. After several years of volunteer service in VISTA, work and travel, he entered graduate school in political science at the University of Chicago, receiving his Ph.D. in 1985. He taught at UCLA from 1984 until 1994, when he moved to Northwestern.

Wallerstein's teaching and research interests are in the area of political economy of advanced industrial societies. His initial work, in collaboration with Adam Przeworski, was concerned with developing a theoretical model of distributive conflict and economic growth (Democracy 1982, APSR 1982, 1988, Review of International Political Economy 1995). This work was followed by a series of studies of union organization and collective bargaining in advanced industrial societies, including papers on collective bargaining, unemployment and the demand for protection (AJPS 1987), cross-national differences in union density (APSR 1989) and the impact of the centralization of bargaining on wage demands (AJPS 1990). After spending a year at the University of Oslo in 1989/90, Wallerstein began collaborating with Karl Ove Moene. Together, they have written on bargaining institutions and economic performance (Flanagan, Moene and Wallerstein, Trade Union Behavior, Pay Bargaining and Economic Performance, Clarendon Press, 1993) the comparison between unionized and worker-owned firms (Journal of Comparative Economics 1993), social democratic labor market institutions (Politics and Society 1995) and the political economy of egalitarian pay policies (Journal of Labor Economics 1997). Finally, in collaboration with Miriam Golden and Peter Lange, Wallerstein had been engaged in a large-scale data collection project concerning institutional change in collective bargaining in 16 advanced industrial societies from 1950 to 1992 (Industrial and Labor Relations Review 1997, Comparative Political Studies 1997). Current research includes the impact of collective bargaining institutions on economic outcomes and the political economy of social insurance policies.

Michael Wallerstein

Wallerstein has served on the executive committees of the Comparative Politics and the Political Economy Sections of the APSA (both from 1993–95).

Continuing Officers and Council for 1997-98 will be:

President (1997-98): M. Kent Jennings, University of California-Santa Barbara

M. Kent Jennings is professor of political science at the University of California, Santa Barbara, and—until recently—at the University of Michigan, where he was also a research scientist at the Center for Political Studies. He began his career on the staff of the Brookings Institution, and has been a visiting professor or scholar at Tilburg University, in the Netherlands, the University of California, Los Angeles,

M. Kent Jennings

the University of Oregon, and Beijing University. His B.A. degree is from the University of Redlands, and Ph.D. is from the University of North Carolina (1961).

Jennings is a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences (1982), and a past fellow of the Center for Advanced Studies in the Behavioral Sciences (1977–78), the Netherlands Institute for Advanced Studies in the Humanities and Social Sciences (1987), and the Guggenheim Foundation (1977–78). He has served on the editorial boards of the American Journal of Political Science, the Journal of Politics, Women and Politics, American Politics Quarterly, and Youth and Society.

His authored or coauthored books include Community Influentials (1964), The Image of the Federal Service (1964), The Political Character of Adolescence (1974), Governing American Schools (1974), Generations and Politics (1981), Parties in Transition (1986), and Continuities in Political Action (1989). Coedited volumes include The Electoral Process (1966), Comparative Political Socialization (1974), and Elections at Home and Abroad (1994). He has also authored or coauthored over 60 journal articles and book chapters.

Jennings has served on the APSA's Council, the Committee on Research Support, and the Committee on the Status of Women in the Profession. He received the APSA's award Anderson for the best dissertation in the field of state and local government (1961), and a mentor of distinction award from the Women's Political Caucus for Political Science (1989). Jennings was a founding member, program cochair, and president of the International Society of Political Psychology (1989-90). He is an associate director of the Inter-University Consortium for Political and Social Research.

Council (1996-98): Martha Ackelsberg, Smith College

Martha Ackelsberg is professor of government and women's studies at Smith College. She earned her B.A. at Radcliffe College, and an M.A. and Ph.D. in politics (Political Philosophy) at Princeton University. She joined the government department at Smith in the fall of 1972, and has since held visiting appointments at the University of Massachusetts (Amherst) and at the University of Sussex. She regularly teaches courses on urban politics, political participation, feminist theory, and political theory, in addition to occasional interdisciplinary courses in women's studies and Spanish anarchism.

Martha Ackelsberg

Her book, Free Women of Spain: Anarchism and the Struggle for the Emancipation of Women, published in 1991 by Indiana University Press, explores the role of women in the Spanish anarchist movement in the years before and during the Spanish Civil War. In addition, she has published numerous articles and book chapters on women's activism in the United States and Latin America, gender and public policy, feminist and democratic theory, changing understandings of families, and on women in Jewish communities. Her current work explores aspects of gender and citizenship.

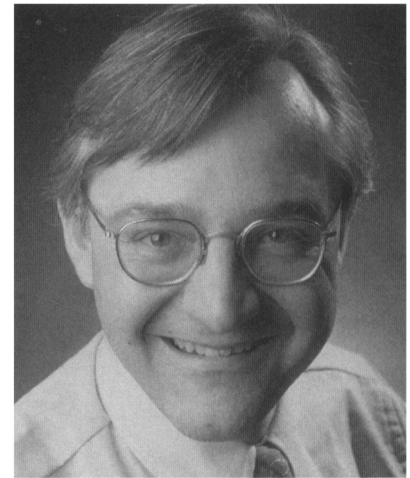

Ackelsberg has held an American Association of University Women Graduate Fellowship, and has been a fellow at the Bunting Institute of Radcliffe College, a faculty associate of the Center for European Studies at Harvard University, a visiting scholar at the Institute for Research on Women at Columbia University, and a visiting fellow at the Walt Whitman Center for the Culture and Politics of Democracy at Rutgers University. Within the profession, she has been active in the Western Political Science Association, most recently serving as section chair of the gender and politics section for the 1996 meetings. Within the APSA, she recently completed a two-year term as a member of the Committee on the Status of Lesbians and Gays in the Profession, and is currently serving as chair of the Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Political Science Caucus.

Council (1996-98): E.J. Dionne, Jr., Washington Post

E.J. Dionne writes for the editorial page and has a weekly column on the Op-Ed page of the Washington Post. He specializes in political issues.

He graduated summa cum laude with a B.A. degree from Harvard University. He attended Oxford University as a Rhodes Scholar, and received a Ph.D. degree in sociology from Oxford University.

Dionne joined the Post in 1990, covering national politics. Prior to joining the Post, he worked for the New York Times as a reporter covering state and local politics for their metro staff, covering the 1980 Presidential campaign, serving as Albany bureau chief and was assigned to the Paris News Bureau while covering the war in Beirut. He covered both Italian news and the Vatican as the Rome Bureau Chief and was nominated for the Pulitzer Prize in 1986 for his Vatican coverage. Mr. Dionne served as chief national political correspondent and received another nomination for the Pulitzer Prize for political coverage. He helped establish the New York Times/CBS News Poll.

E.J. Dionne, Jr.

Dionne has published articles in academic books and publications including the New Republic and Commonwealth. He is the author of Why Americans Hate Politics (Simon & Schuster, 1991), and They Only Look Dead (Simon & Schuster, 1996).

Council (1996-98): Kathie Stromile Golden, Morris Brown College

Kathie Stromile Golden is associate professor of political science and coordinator of the Morris Brown College faculty staff research fund. She earned her Bachelor's and Master's degrees at Southern University, Baton Rouge, and her Ph. D. at the University of Kentucky.

She is a past president of the National Conference of Black Political Scientists and is currently director of NCOBPS's Graduate Assistantship Program. She also serves on the editorial board of the National Political Science Review and as advisory editor for the Morgan State University Journal of Undergraduate Research.

Her publications include "Media in Warsaw Pact States: Explanations of Crisis Coverage" (1992), and "Changes in Central and East European Communist Systems," National Political Science Review (1992).

Kathie Stromile Golden

She has received Fulbright Study Abroad, National Endowment for the Humanities, and Lily Foundation grants for curriculum development. For her leadership and service, Stromile Golden has received numerous honors and awards. From 1988–1990 she was a Chancellor's Postdoctoral Research Fellow at the University of Illinois-Champaign. In 1993 and 1995 she received the National Conference of Black Political Scientist's Presidential Award, and has received grants for study and research in China, Russia, and Poland.

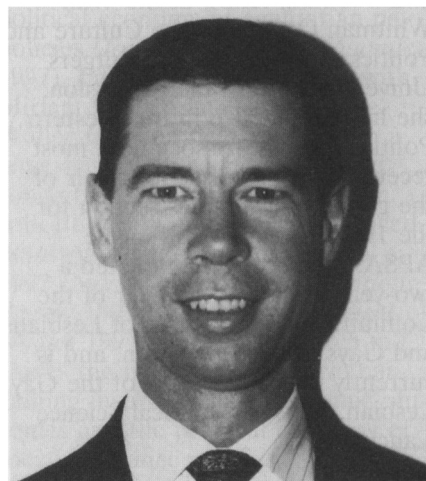

In the APSA, she has served on the Heinz Eulau Award Committee, and as cochair of the Communist Politics and After Division for the 1995 Program. She was an APSA Fellow and currently serves on the Committee on the Status of Blacks.

Council (1996-98): John E. Jackson, University of Michigan

John E. Jackson is professor of political science and of business economics and public policy, research scientist, and chair of the department of political science at the University of Michigan. His research and teaching cover a number of topics in political economy, U.S. politics, and empirical methods. Current research projects concern models of political preferences and electoral competition, the role of entrepreneurship in economic and political transitions, regional economic development, and the development of statistical methods for social scientists. This work includes studies in Michigan, the United States, China, Ukraine, Russia and Poland.

Jackson's publications have appeared in such journals and edited volumes as the American Political Science Review, American Journal of Political Science, Public Opinion Quarterly, Regional Science and Urban Economics, Small Business Economics, The New Handbook of Politi- cal Science, Political Analysis and Research Bulletin: Polish Academy of Sciences. Jackson is also the author or editor of four books.

John E. Jackson

Jackson was awarded a Guggenheim Fellowship in 1979–80, a Fulbright Research Fellowship (Poland) in 1993–94, and the APSA's Heinz Eulau Prize in 1994. He was president of the Methodology Section of the American Political Science Association from 1985 to 1987. He currently is co-editor of the Michigan Press series in Political Analysis.

Jackson received undergraduate and master's degrees in industrial administration from Carnegie-Mellon University and an M.P.A. and a Ph.D. in political economy and government from Harvard University. He taught at the United States Air Force Academy (1969–70) Harvard University (1977–80), and the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania (1977–80) before coming to the University of Michigan in 1980.

Council (1996-98): David Laitin, University of Chicago

David D. Laitin is the William R. Kenan Jr. Professor of Political Science and director of the Center for the Study of Politics, History and Culture (Wilder House) at the University of Chicago. He received his B.A. from Swarthmore College and his Ph.D. from the University of California, Berkeley. From 1975–87, he served on the political science faculty of the University of California, San Diego, and chaired that department in 1986-87. As a comparativist, he has conducted field research in Somalia, Nigeria, Catalonia, and Estonia. His books include: "Politics, Language, and Thought: The Somali Experience" (Chicago, 1977), "Hegemony and Culture: Politics and Religious Change Among the Yoruba" (Chicago, 1986), and "Language Repertoires and State Construction in Africa" (Cambridge, 1992). He has received the Gregory Luebbert Award from the Comparative Politics Section for his "The Tower of Babel as a Coordination Game: Political Linguistics in Ghana" published in the American Political Science Review. He has also received the Mary Parker Follett Prize from the Politics and History Section for his (co-authored) "Language and the Construction of States: The Case of Catalonia in Spain" published in

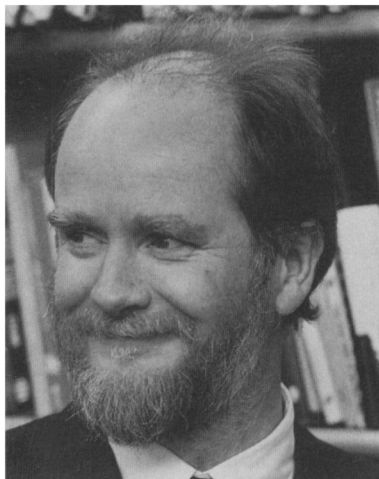

David Laitin

Politics and Society. He has received fellowships from the National Endowment for the Humanities, the National Science Foundation, the Howard Foundation, and in 1995–96, he was the recipient of a Guggenheim Foundation Fellowship. In 1995, he was elected as a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. From 1993–95 he served as president of the Comparative Politics Section of the American Political Science Association.

Council (1996-98): Michael Laver, Trinity College Dublin

Michael Laver is professor political science at Trinity College Dublin. Before this he was professor of political science at University College Galway, and previous full-time appointments were at the University of Liverpool, and Queen's University Belfast. He has spent periods as a visiting professor at Harvard University, Duke University and the University of Texas at Austin, and as Scholar in Residence at the Rockefeller Foundation's Villa Serbelloni in Bellagio. He holds a B.A. and M.A. from Essex University and his Ph.D. is from Liverpool.

He is co-editor of the European Journal of Political Research and a former elected member of the Executive of the European Consortium for Political Research. He was founding editor of Irish Political Studies and is a former president of the Political Studies Association of Ireland. He has recently finished a tour of duty as a member of the APSR editorial board and remains on the editorial boards of a number of other journals. Elected to the Royal Irish Academy, he is a founding member of the Academy's Social Science Research Council, and last year finally succeeded in extracting money from the Irish government to fund the Council's program of social science research. He is the only political scientist on the Irish government's Constitution Review Group, a body engaged in a root and branch review of the Irish constitution.

Michael Laver

His main research interests have been in the theory and practice of party competition and government formation, and he has published over a dozen books and about 80 articles on these and other matters. Most recent books include: Making and Breaking Governments (1996, with Ken Shepsle); Representative Government in Modern Europe (1995, with Michael Gallagher and Peter Mair); Cabinet Ministers and Parliamentary Government (edited 1994, with Ken Shepsle); and Multiparty Government (1990, with Norman Schofield). He is currently revising two out-of-print early works, Playing Politics and The Politics of Private Desires and planning, after this, to begin a methodological and empirical project on estimating policy positions from published sources.

Council (1996-98): John Gerald Ruggie, Columbia University

John Gerard Ruggie is the Burgess Professor of Political Science and International Affairs at Columbia University, where he served as dean of the School of International and Public Affairs from 1991–1996. He previously taught at Columbia from 1978 to 1987, before joining the faculty of the newly created Graduate School of International Relations and Pacific Studies at the University of California, San Diego. While at UCSD, he also served as director of the University of California's systemwide Institute on Global Conflict and Cooperation.

Among his scholarly publications are six edited or authored books—including, most recently, Winning the Peace: America and World Order in the New Era (1996), as well as a forthcoming collection of essays, Institutions and Transformation in the World Polity—together with some fifty scholarly articles and book chapters on such diverse topics as international relations theory, international political economy, international institutions, and U.S. foreign policy. He delivered the 1994 Malim Harding Lecture at the University of Toronto, and the 1994 Jean Monnet Lecture at the European University Institute in Florence, Italy. During 1995–96, he was president of the Association of Professional Schools of International Affairs.

John Gerald Ruggie

In the policy realm, Ruggie has been a consultant to the United Nations, including the Under-Secretary General for Peacekeeping and the Director-General for Development and International Economic Cooperation, and he chaired the Advisory Committee of the Center for National Security Studies at the Los Alamos National Laboratory from 1987-1995. He is a member of the Council on Foreign Relations and a past Governor of the Foreign Policy Association as well as the United Nations Association of the United States of America.

Ruggie studied history and politics at McMaster University in Canada, and received his Ph.D. from the University of California, Berkeley, in 1974, remaining on the faculty there until 1978. He has held visiting appointments at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace in Geneva, Switzerland; Harvard University's Center for International Affairs; the Royal Institute of International Affairs in London; Beijing University; the Policy Studies Group in Tokyo; and in May 1996 was the Leonard Davis Distinguished Fellow at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem.

Council (1996-98): Joseph Stewart, Jr., University of New Mexico

Joseph Stewart, Jr. is professor of political science at the University of New Mexico, after sojourns at the University of New Orleans, West Virginia University, University of Texas at Dallas, and visiting positions at the Educational Testing Service, San Diego State University, Rice University, and Wichita State University. He received his Ph.D. from the University of Houston (1977); M.A. from Florida State University (1971); A.B. from the University of Georgia (1970).

Stewart has been President of the Southwestern Political Science Association and has served or continues to serve on the executive councils of the Public Policy; Race, Ethnicity, and Politics; and Urban Politics Sections of the APSA, as well as the Midwest Political Science Association. In addition, he is a member of the APSA's Committee on Organized Sections and was the Constitutional Law and Jurisprudence Section representative on the 1996 Program Committee. He is a member of the editorial boards of the American Journal of Political Science, Political Research Quarterly, and the "Race and Ethnicity in Urban Politics" Series at the University Press of Virginia. Previously, he served on the editorial board of State and Local Government Review.

Stewart's research interests span civil rights policy, racial politics, regulation, judicial politics, and education policy, and his work has appeared in the American Journal of Political Science, Journal of Politics, Social Science Quarterly, National Political Science Review, Public Administration Review, and a variety of other political science, public policy, public law, public administration, and education journals. He is a co-winner of the 1992 Herbert Kaufman Best Paper Award from the Public Administration section of the APSA. His most recent books are texts: "Can We All Get Along?" Racial and Ethnic Minorities in American Politics, with Paula D. McClain (Westview, 1995), and Public Policy: An Evolutionary Approach, with James P. Lester (West, 1996). He is perhaps best known for his coauthorship, with Ken Meier, of "Rotisserie Political Science" (PS, September, 1992) and his appearance on the "Contributions of Elvis Presley to Political Science" panel at the 1989 Southern Political Science Association meetings in Memphis.

Joseph Stewart, Jr.