

EARLY BLACK WRITERS

This series makes available some of the earliest texts for the study of Black literature. Each volume contains an introduction to the writer/subject and full texts annotated with extensive notes. Taken from British African and American sources the texts reflect the growing interest in the origins of contemporary Black literature.

LATEST TITLE

The Letters of Ignatius Sancho

Edited by Paul Edwards and Pauline Rewt, with a foreword by David Dabydeen

Born in 1729 aboard a slave ship and employed as an English household servant from infancy, Ignatius Sancho became a protege of the Duke of Montagu and a friend of the novelist Sterne and the actor Garrick, as well as a celebrated literary figure in his own right. His letters, always well-written, give fascinating insights into 'ordinary' 18th-century London life, and provide an invaluable contrast with the more radical slave narrative available from the period, much of it of American origin.

Hardback 160pp 0 7486 0453 7 £30.00

OTHER TITLES AVAILABLE

Black Writers in Britain

Paul Edwards & David Dabydeen (eds)

Paperback 0 7486 0327 1 £12.95

The Travels of William Wells Brown

Paul Jefferson (ed)

Paperback 0 7486 0308 5 £12.95

Horrors of Slavery

Iain McCalman (ed)

Paperback 0 7486 0363 £12.95

Available from your nearest bookshop or order direct from:

Edinburgh University Press

22 George Square

Edinburgh EH8 9LF

Tel: 031 650 6207 Fax: 031 662 0553