Elite Activism and Political Transformation in China

Zhejiang Province, 1865-1911

---

Mary Backus Rankin. Previous studies of the roots of the 1911 Revolution in China have concentrated on the emergence of new social classes and a provincial activist elite in the decade before the revolution. This book shows that social elites actually began to emerge as a political force much earlier in the aftermath of the Taiping Rebellion. Through a detailed examination of elite groups in the economically advanced coastal province of Zhejiang, the author reevaluates the causes of the 1911 Revolution and also reinterprets the socio-political history of the last half-century of the Qing Dynasty. $39.50

Local Merchants and the Chinese Bureaucracy, 1750-1950

Susan Mann. How did China's stable agrarian society accommodate centuries of dynamic commercial expansion? This study shows how the government policies of High Qing times supported an unprecedented commercial expansion by holding the bureaucracy in check, keeping market taxes low, and farming those taxes to local merchants. The author presents compelling new evidence for a fundamental reassessment of the importance of local merchants and trade organizations in traditional China, and a new perspective from which to explore state intrusions into local society during the 19th and early 20th centuries. $37.50

Born Red

A Chronicle of the Cultural Revolution

Gao Yuan. Foreword by William A. Joseph. Born Red is an artistically wrought personal account, written from inside the experience, of the years 1966-69, when the author was a teenager at middle school. Gao was caught up in very dramatic events, which he recounts as he understood them at the time—the mass rallies against “capitalist-roader” teachers and administrators, the division of school and town into armed camps, the clash between father and son. Gao shows how, in the end, everyone he knew—classmates, teachers, family members—became victims of a mass movement out of control. Cloth, $39.50; paper, $7.95

Man and Land in Chinese History

An Economic Analysis

Kang Chao. A sweeping new interpretation of Chinese economic history emerges from this analysis of two millennia of economic developments in traditional China. Rejecting dynastic, positivist, and Marxian views, the author argues that since 200 B.C. China was a market economy consisting of countless small production units. With limited land for cultivation, freeholders and tenants were forced to adjust their economic choices and decisions in response to an increasing man-land ratio as population pressures mounted through the centuries. Although often labeled the culprit, it was not the unequal distribution of land but the increasing man-land ratio that led to China's impoverishment and technological stagnation. $35.00

Manuscripts

The China Quarterly welcomes the submission of manuscripts from scholars, including research students, on all aspects of contemporary China and from all points of view, including those which deal with Taiwan and the Overseas Chinese. Articles on China prior to 1949 are also welcome, particularly, but not exclusively, when these relate directly to contemporary China or to the history of the Chinese Communist Party. Articles should be submitted, in triplicate, to the editorial office. They should be typed in double spacing, footnotes being placed at the end of the article; preferably conform to the styling of The China Quarterly; and normally not exceed 8–10,000 words in length. A style sheet is available upon request. Submission of a manuscript is taken to imply that it has not previously been published and that it is not currently being considered elsewhere.

The China Quarterly is published by the School of Oriental and African Studies, London University. The views expressed in articles are those of individual authors and do not necessarily represent the views of the School.

This is a monumental event which adds new dimensions to the study of China. The availability of these Central Files could open a new era of intensive multi-archival research on China.

Professor of History
University of California, Santa Barbara

The history of China in the twentieth century is a dramatic record of civil war, invasion, and economic and social revolution. There is no better source for the study of these eventful years than the Central Files of the U.S. State Department. The reports of American diplomatic personnel throughout China and the Far East are an outstanding set of primary research materials on every facet of modern Chinese history, containing over 275,000 pages of special reports, confidential correspondence, interviews, minutes of meetings, and translated documents. Published in cooperation with the National Archives and Records Administration, these files document in extensive detail the political, military, economic, social, and foreign affairs of China from 1930 through 1954. No other research collection matches the historical range, the in-depth analysis, and the exhaustive treatment of these files.

These records are indispensable for professors and students who are interested in China. It will be a boon to researchers to have access to the State Department's voluminous files in one convenient microfilm collection.
