
Project 87: Grants and Fellowships

Project 87, the joint study of the United States Constitution sponsored by the American Historical Association and the American Political Science Association, has announced two competitions. Applications are currently being accepted for grants in aid of research, and for fellows in residence at The Brookings Institution in Washington, D.C.

Grants to support research will be available in two categories: for amounts of less than $5000, to support such costs as research assistance, photocopying, typing, and travel; and for larger amounts, including funds to enable grantees to take time off from normal duties. The application deadline for the first round of research grants is June 1, 1978. The period of the grant can begin as early as September 1, 1978. The starting date and duration of the grant will be negotiable; applicants will be invited to state their preferences.

The fellowships at Brookings will enable qualified persons to devote full time to constitutional studies for a stated period (ranging normally from three months to a full year). Applications for fellows in residence are due June 1, 1978. The period of residency in Washington may begin as early as January 1, 1979. Applicants will be invited to indicate their preference as to starting time and duration of the fellowship. Compensation will normally be arranged to match the fellow's salary and benefits for the year preceding the fellowship.

Applications for grants and fellowships will be asked to state the nature and significance of the work they intend to do during the period for which support is requested, as well as their plans for disseminating the results. Two letters of reference will be required, assessing the significance of the work proposed and the applicant's fitness to do it.

There will be a second round of competition for research grants and fellowships in the fall, with a deadline for applications of October 1, 1978.

Anyone interested in applying can obtain full information by writing to Dr. Donald Allen Robinson, Project Director, Project 87, 1527 New Hampshire Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036.
