JAPANESE STUDIES FROM PRINCETON

Kenkenroku

A Diplomatic Record of the Sino-Japanese War, 1894-1895, by Mutsu Munemitsu
Translated and Edited with Historical Notes by Gordon Mark Berger

Illuminating a pivotal episode in East Asian history, Berger offers a translation based firmly on contemporary diplomatic correspondence. One of the remarkably few "inside" accounts by Meiji statesmen, the work is a stunning record of the decision-making and diplomatic maneuvering of the period.

My Thirty-Three Years' Dream

The Autobiography of Miyazaki Tōten
Translated by Marius B. Jansen and Eto Shinkichi

Jansen and Eto offer the only English translation of the autobiography of Miyazaki Torazō, Sun Yat-sen's contact for Japanese assistance to the 1911 Revolution. Annotated by Professors Jansen and Eto, the book elucidates the experiences of Miyazaki's generation with Western culture and the development of an Asian consciousness.

Clothbound, £18.00

Private Academies of the Tokugawa Period

Richard Rubinger

Widening the focus of previous studies of Japanese education during the Tokugawa period, Rubinger emphasizes the role of the shijuku, or private academies of advanced studies, in preparing Japan for its modern transformation. Included are extensive case studies of representative shijuku types, based largely on primary source material, some analyzed for the first time.

Clothbound, £19.80

Conflict in Modern Japanese History

The Neglected Tradition
Edited by Tetsuo Najita and
J. Victor Koschmann

Depicting the conflict and uncertainty that have bedeviled modern Japan, the 18 contributors to the book interpret the peasant rebellions, insurrections, assassinations, urban riots, and other similar events that most historians have dismissed as aberrations in the central flow of Japanese history. Sponsored by the Social Science Research Council and the Joint Commission on Japanese Studies of the American Council of Learned Societies

Artist and Patron in Postwar Japan

Dance, Music, Theater, and the Visual Arts, 1955-1980
Thomas R. H. Havens

By a study of patronage since the mid-1950s, Havens portrays the social context and organization of the Japanese arts, showing that their postwar blossoming has occurred largely because of the ways in which art serves the social system. Using extensive interviews with arts administrators, the author examines support for the arts from both governmental and private sources.

ORIENTAL DOCUMENTS VI

LETTERS FROM BARBARY 1576-1774
Arabic Documents in the Public Record Office

Translated and annotated by

J. F. P. Hopkins

Here for the first time the English reader with an interest in the history of North Africa is enabled to sample some of the more inaccessible material preserved, largely unexamined and unexploited, in the Public Record Office. The documents presented consist of letters written in Arabic and addressed for the most part by the governments of Morocco and Algeria to the government of England. The earliest is dated 1576 and the latest 1774, that is, they span the reigns of Elizabeth I to George III. They deal with diplomatic relations, exchanges of ambassadors, treaties, the supply of arms and other affairs of high policy, but also with shipwrecks, the redemption of captives, administrative malpractice and other affairs of the sort which occupy consuls. The translations are unvarnished and keep as close to the Arabic as possible. They are provided with enough comment to enable those wishing to pursue the subject further to do so. There is an Introduction and a Glossary of Arabic words.
