by PHILIBERT DE L'ORME

Commentary by J.M. PEROUSE DE MONTCLOS

Paris, Léonce Laget, 1987, in-4, 65 pages of commentary and 740 pages of reprints of the works of the famous french architect.

Subscription price : Frs 420

After date of publication : Frs 480

The two major works by Philibert de l'Orme have been extensively published in the 17th century (1626 and 1648). In that edition, the original text by Philibert de l'Orme was highly altered. However it contained the 40 plates which were probably meant to appear in the second volume which in fact was never published. These plates have made the 17th century edition widely successful (1964 London and 1981 Bruxelles reprints) though it does constitute a defective edition.

Regarding the reprint by Ch. Nizet (1894), it should be noted that it was established from an arranged edition mid 16th century - 17th century, and not from an eleven volume edition of 1568 as Nizet always asserted.

The commentary by J.M. Perouse de Montclos in the present edition represents the first critical essay ever written about the works of Philibert de l'Orme. Though it does not intend to cover all the aspects of the french architect's works, it represents the reference edition.

The study in its « ensemble » proposed by J.M. Perouse de Montclos brings out the ambivalence of the work. It shows the use Philibert de l'Orme makes of traditional techniques studied on the site and which in itself was inventive. It also scrutinizes in these volumes what is borrowed from the italian erudition.

The first complete edition with Jean-Marie Perouse de Montclos's commentary brings an entirely new interpretation on Philibert' de l'Orme works.
