

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

WILLIAM L. F. FELSTINER is Director and Senior Research Fellow at the American Bar Foundation. He is currently conducting a study of asbestos litigating in the United States and United Kingdom.

CAROL J. GREENHOUSE is Associate Professor of Anthropology at Cornell University. She is the author of Praying for Justice: Faith, Order and Community in an American Town (Ithaca: Cornell University Press). She has also written on comparative problems in the cross-cultural analysis of dispute settlement and social ordering.

CHRISTINE B. HARRINGTON is Assistant Professor at New York University in the Politics Department. She has written a book Shadow Justice (1985) and published several articles about the alternative dispute resolution movement in the United States. She is engaged in a study of the formation of federal administrative law practice, which focuses on the lawyers who argue regulatory cases in the U.S. Circuit Courts of Appeals and the role of the legal profession in shaping this practice.

SALLY ENGLE MERRY is Associate Professor of Anthropology at Wellesley College. She is the author of Urban Danger: Life in a Neighborhood of Strangers and numerous articles on legal ideology and legal consciousness, mediation in cross-cultural perspective and American society, and urban social order. She is currently completing a manuscript on the people who bring interpersonal problems to court and the implications of their actions for the relations between working-class consciousness of law and the state.

ELIZABETH MERTZ is a Research Fellow at the American Bar Foundation, Chicago, Illinois. She received her Ph.D. in Anthropology from Duke University and J.D. from Northwestern University. Her research and publications have focused primarily on the interaction of language, semiotics, social identity, and the law. She is the co-editor, with Richard J. Parmentier, of Semiotic Mediation: Sociocultural and Psychological Perspectives (New York: Academic Press, 1985).

BRINKLEY MESSICK is a Lecturer in the Department of Anthropology at Brandeis University. He has conducted ethnographic and social historical research in both Morocco and the Yemen Arab Republic and has published articles on legal hermeneutics, notarial documents, prosecution, education, gender discourses, and law and political economy. He is currently completing a book on the interrelationship of law, textuality, and history in Islam and is the editor of the Association for Political and Legal Anthropology Newsletter (the APLA Newsletter).

AUSTIN SARAT is William Nelson Cromwell Professor of Jurisprudence and Political Science at Amherst College and Visiting Research Fellow at the American Bar Foundation. His recent publications include "The New 'Formalism' in Disputing and Dispute Processing" 21 Law & Society Review 695 (1988) and Sitting in Judgment: Sentencing White Collar Criminals, co-authored with Stanton Wheeler and Kenneth Mann (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1988). Among his current research activities is a study of the ideology of professionalism among solo-practice lawyers.

JONATHAN SIMON is currently a law clerk to Judge William Canby, Jr. of the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. He received his J.D. from the University of California (Berkeley) School of Law (Boalt Hall) in 1987. He is a candidate for a Ph.D. in Berkeley's Jurisprudence and Social Policy Program where he is completing a dissertation on administrative discretion to return parolees to prison. He has written and lectured on risk management, privacy, the AIDS crisis, the police, the death penalty, and constitutional interpretation.

GERALD TURKEL is Associate Professor of Sociology at the University of Delaware. He received his Ph.D. from the University of California, Santa Barbara. He has written on social theory, political and legal ideology, and the legislation of loan guarantees for private corporations.