

NOTES ON THE CONTRIBUTORS

GABRIEL AVILA CASALECCHI é mestre em ciência política pela Universidade Federal de Minas Gerais (UFMG), onde atualmente é aluno do curso de doutorado. Suas mais recentes publicações inclui o artigo “Trust and Political Information: Attitudinal Change among Participants in the Youth Parliament in Brazil” (Brazilian Political Science Review, 2012), com Mario Fuks. Ele teve como tema da dissertação a socialização política no Parlamento Jovem e seu doutorado é dedicado à cultura política no Brasil. Suas áreas de interesse incluem cultura política, socialização política e educação cívica.

KATRINA BURGESS is associate professor of political economy at the Fletcher School, Tufts University. Her research interests include migration, remittances, democratic governance, labor politics, and state-society relations. She is author of Parties and Unions in the New Global Economy (Pittsburgh, 2004) and coeditor with Abraham F. Lowenthal of The California-Mexico Connection (Stanford, 1993), as well as numerous journal articles and book chapters. She is currently writing a book on the patterns and implications of emigrant engagement in homeland politics in post-1980 democracies in five regions.

EDWARD CHAUCA is an assistant professor at the College of Charleston and holds a PhD from the University of California, Los Angeles. He is working on a book-length manuscript on the representations of mental illnesses in Peruvian literature. His research interests include the connections among mental health, political economy, human rights, and theory.

VERÓNICA FIGUEROA HUENCHO es profesora asociada del Instituto de Asuntos Públicos de la Universidad de Chile (PhD, ciencias de la gestión, ESADE). Realizó sus estudios de postdoctorado en el Centro de Estudios Latinoamericanos de la Universidad de Stanford en el área de políticas públicas indígenas. Actualmente es directora de la Escuela de Gobierno y Gestión Pública de la Universidad de Chile, e investigadora responsable del proyecto Fondecyt N° 11110052. Ha trabajado como consultora para el Forum Universal de la Culturas (Barcelona), el Banco Interamericano de Desarrollo, la Organización de Estados Iberoamericanos para la Educación, la Ciencia y la Cultura, entre otros.

MARIO FUKS é doutor em ciência política pelo Instituto Universitário de Pesquisa do Rio de Janeiro (IUPERJ) e professor associado da Universidade Federal de Minas Gerais (UFMG). Suas mais recentes publicações incluem os artigos “Informação e conceitualização: A dimensão cognitiva da desigualdade política entre jovens de Belo Horizonte” (Revista Brasileira das Ciências Sociais, 2011), com Frederico Pereira; “Efeitos diretos, indiretos e tardios: Trajetórias da transmissão intergeracional da participação política” (Lua Nova, 2011); “Trust and Political Information: Attitudinal Change among Participants in the Youth Parliament in Brazil” (Brazilian Political Science Review, 2012), com Gabriel Casalecchi; e “Atitudes, cognição e participação política: Padrões de influência dos ambientes de socialização sobre o perfil político dos jovens” (Opinião Pública, 2012). Suas áreas de interesse são a cultura política, participação política e opinião pública.

Latin American Research Review, Vol. 51, No. 2. © 2016 by the Latin American Studies Association.

CRISTINA GARCÍA-MORENO es profesora del Departamento de Antropología, Filosofía y Trabajo Social de la Universitat Rovira i Virgili (URV) de Tarragona, España, y doctora en antropología por la URV. Entre sus principales líneas de investigación destacan las migraciones transnacionales, la migración cubana, migración y género (sistemas, relaciones e ideología de género), migraciones por amor y matrimonios mixtos (binacionales, relaciones sentimentales transnacionales). La mayoría de sus publicaciones se centran en estas temáticas.

ÍÑIGO GONZÁLEZ-FUENTE is professor and researcher at the Faculty of Education of the University of Cantabria (Spain) and associated researcher at the Ibero-American Institute of the University of Salamanca (Spain). His research interests include political participation, political clientelism, new ruralities, and education, youth, and social inequality. He is the author of several book chapters and articles in academic journals, most recently "Community, Cargo System, and Social Project: An Analytical Proposal of Local Societies in Mexico" (2011) and "Community Projects in the Era of Globalization: The Case of a Local Rural Society in Mexico" (2012).

MARIA-THERESE GUSTAFSSON is a postdoctoral research fellow at the Department of Political Science, Stockholm University. Her main research interests are climate change, natural resource governance, transnational corporations, and social mobilization. Gustafsson holds a PhD from the University of Stockholm. She has been a visiting fellow at Cornell University and has published articles in Latin American Research Review and elsewhere. She is currently working on a research project on climate change and security and another on participatory mechanisms in natural resource extraction.

TURID HAGENE is professor of development studies at the Faculty of Education and International Studies, Oslo, and Akershus University College (Norway). Her research interests include everyday political practices, political participation, political clientelism, elections, religious practices, love, and gender. She has published books—Negotiating Love in Post-Revolutionary Nicaragua: The Role of Love in the Reproduction of Gender Asymmetry (2008), Work and Love, Patronage and Patriarchy: Histories and Memories of a Cooperative and Its Women, Nicaragua, 1983–2000 (2002, translated as Amor y trabajo, 2008)—and a series of articles from her research in Mexico. She has published in Political Geography, Nueva Antropología, Forum for Development Studies, European Review of Latin American and Caribbean Studies, Argumentos, and Latinoamérica. Her most recent publication is "Political Clientelism in Mexico: Bridging the Gap between Citizens and the State" (2015).

EVE KALYVA is an art critic working on the relation between art and politics, conceptual and contemporary art practices, multimodality and social semiotics. She has held appointments as lecturer in Europe and Latin America and has collaborated with art institutions as curator, critic, and artist in residence. Her publications span art history and theory, philosophy, social semiotics, Latin American studies, and visual culture. She is currently preparing a monograph on image and text juxtapositions in international conceptual art practices.

JORGE PAVEZ OJEDA es académico del Departamento de Sociología de la Universidad Alberto Hurtado (Santiago de Chile). Tiene un doctorado en sociología por la École des Hautes Études en Sciences Sociales (París). Es investigador responsable del proyecto de investigación Fondecyt Regular Núm. 1131144, "Imaginarios de género, representaciones del cuerpo y mercados del sexo (Chile, siglo XX)", y ha publicado varios libros y artículos sobre temas de género, raza, etnia y nación en Latinoamérica. Su último libro se intitula Laboratorios etnográficos: Los archivos de la antropología en Chile (1880–1980) (Ediciones Universidad Alberto Hurtado, 2015).

JESÚS SANZ ABAD es profesor del Departamento de Antropología Social de la Universidad Complutense de Madrid y doctor en antropología social. Sus líneas de investigación están relacionadas con las migraciones transnacionales; las estrategias económicas de la migración; la vinculación entre remesas, migración y desarrollo; la antropología urbana y los movimientos sociales. Es autor de diferentes artículos y comunicaciones relacionadas con estas temáticas.

MATTHEW SINGER is associate professor of political science at the University of Connecticut, where he researches how elections serve as mechanisms of accountability and representation. His work has appeared in Journal of Politics, Comparative Politics, Comparative Political Studies, British Journal of Political Science, European Journal of Political Research, Electoral Studies, Development Policy Review, PS: Political Science and Politics, and Política y Gobierno.

MICHAEL TOUCHTON is an assistant professor in political science at Boise State University. He studies the comparative political economy of democracy and investment in emerging markets. In particular, his research focuses on the ways governments make credible commitments to property rights and contract enforcement, as well as how democratic innovations affect well-being around the world. Some of his recent work appears in World Development, Comparative Political Studies, and Urban Affairs Review.

