Advances in Policy Studies, 1950-1990

As part of the 1989 Annual Meeting, the APSA Policy Studies Section and the Policy Studies Organization are jointly sponsoring a set of panels organized around the common theme of advances in policy studies, 1950-1990.

The symposium panels will produce a critical synthesis of theoretical, methodological, and substantive developments in policy studies. The panels will yield some fifteen papers, together with critical commentaries, documenting the progress and problems of policy studies since the publication of Lerner and Lasswell's The Policy Sciences: Recent Developments in Scope and Method (1950). It is anticipated that the symposium proceedings will be published.

The symposium panels will begin Wednesday, 7:00 p.m., August 30, with a presentation on the role of political science in policy studies chaired by Aaron Wildavsky, University of California-Berkeley. The remaining theme panels will be held on Thursday, August 31. The panels include: "Shaping a Multidisciplinary Identity," chaired by B. Guy Peters; "The Role of Political Philosophy and Epistemology," chaired by Eugene Meehan; "Knowledge Transfer for Improved Decision Making," chaired by Carol Weiss; and "Looking Toward the 21st Century," chaired by Daniel Mazmanian. For more information regarding these panels see the annual meeting preliminary program in this issue of PS.

The Policy Studies Section and the Policy Studies Organization will also offer a cocktail reception on Wednesday evening, and a buffet lunch on Thursday. There will be a charge of $30 for these two events and reservations are needed. To make your reservations send a check for $30 to Professor William N.
