A SURVEY OF THE ANCIENT MONUMENTS OF THE CITY OF LONDON

ST. PAUL'S and the other churches of Sir Christopher Wren, the Halls of the City Companies, the Guildhall, the tomb of Milton, the Inner and Middle Temple, Clifford's Inn and the Monument . . . these are some of the relics of the past life of the City of London which are now for the first time described by a Royal Commission appointed by H.M. the King.

A book in which they record their Survey, a handsome quarto volume, profusely illustrated with original photographs, is now ready.

The foundations for this volume have been laid in the recent work on ROMAN LONDON, which has received an enthusiastic reception from all students of the early history of the City. The account is now brought down to the year 1714 A.D. It is a commonplace that the powerful force wielded by the City throughout English history gives to the records of its past an interest which can be equalled by no other city in the English-speaking world. This volume gives a crisp and concise presentation of all the known facts relating to the City's historical buildings made living by a wealth of photographs devoted to their complete illustration.

The series of four volumes which the Royal Commission has devoted to the antiquities of London, all richly illustrated with striking photographs, are :

Vol. I	WESTMINSTER ABBEY	21s. net.
Vol. II	WEST LONDON	21s. net.
Vol. III	ROMAN LONDON	18s. net.
Vol. IV, now ready	THE CITY	21s. net.

Postage 9d. extra per volume.
