Journal of the Society for American Music

Journal of the Society for American Music (JSAM) is an international, peer-reviewed journal that explores all aspects of American music and music in the Americas. JSAM is dedicated to supporting scholarship that transcends disciplinary boundaries, cutting across historical musicology, music theory, ethnomusicology, cultural theory, and American studies. JSAM encourages international dialogue across disciplines. The journal features articles, reviews of books, recordings, and multimedia items, and explorations of special topics.

Contributors

Erica K. Argyropoulos is a Ph.D. candidate in musicology at the University of Kansas. Her research specialties include the music of Leonard Bernstein, film music, and select popular music traditions of Israel, Great Britain, and the United States. Her dissertation, “Conducting Culture: Leonard Bernstein, the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra, and Jewish Musical Identity, 1947–1969,” explores Bernstein’s musical relationship with the organization.

Ryan Raul Bañagale is a Ph.D. candidate in historical musicology at Harvard University. He is working on a dissertation examining various arrangements of Gershwin’s Rhapsody in Blue. His article “‘Each Man Kills the Thing He Loves’: Bernstein’s Formative Relationship with Rhapsody in Blue” appears in the February 2009 issue of this journal. He is the co-founding editor of the academic blog Amusicology.

Susan H. Borwick, musicologist, theorist, and composer, is Professor of Music at Wake Forest University. She teaches American music and other topics in Music, Women’s Studies, and the Divinity School. Her scholarly publications range from Lotte Lenya to Amy Beach, from incorporating women into a men’s college to reclaiming gender in modernism. The Riverside Church, New York City, and the 2009 American Choral Directors Association national convention have recently featured her compositions.

Andreas Giger is Associate Professor of Music at Louisiana State University. His research interests include nineteenth-century Italian opera and the work of Leonard Bernstein. He is the author of Verdi and the French Aesthetic: Verse, Stanza, and Melody in Nineteenth-Century Opera (2008) and Verismo (2004) in the Handwörterbuch der musikalischen Terminologie. He is coeditor of Music in the Mirror (2002) and founder of the Internet database saggi musicali italiani (www.chmtl.indiana.edu/smi).

Edward Green, composer and musicologist, has been a professor at the Manhattan School of Music since 1984. In addition to editing the forthcoming Cambridge Companion to Duke Ellington, he has published studies of Sergei Prokofiev, Stephen Foster, Harry Partch, Zhou Long, and Gustav Mahler. In a recent essay for Jazz Perspectives (2/2) he explored the motivic structures of Will Marion Cook’s music in relation to those of Duke Ellington.

Loren Kajikawa is Assistant Professor of Ethnomusicology and Musicology at the University of Oregon’s School of Music and Dance. A past recipient of the Society for American Music’s Mark Tucker Award, his current research explores the intersection of culture, ideology, and commerce in African American music to better understand how musicians, fans, and critics negotiate and contest issues of race and politics.

George E. Lewis is the Edwin H. Case Professor of American Music at Columbia University and the director of Columbia's Center for Jazz Studies. A 2002 MacArthur Fellow, Lewis's work as composer, improviser, and performer is documented on more than 120 recordings. Lewis is the author of A Power Stronger than Itself: The AACM and American Experimental Music (University of Chicago Press, 2008).

Ruth Sara Longobardi is Assistant Professor of Music and Critical Studies at the University of Richmond. She received her Ph.D. in musicology in 2004 from Columbia University. She is writing a book on contemporary opera, Re-producing the Real in Turn-of-the-Millennium America: Contemporary Opera, American Icons, and the Technologies of Sonic Representation. Her recent articles on opera and identity appear in The Journal of Musicology and Twentieth-Century Music.

Horace J. Maxile, Jr., is associate director of research at the Center for Black Music Research (Columbia College Chicago). He holds a Ph.D. in Musicology (Music Theory emphasis) from Louisiana State University. His research interests include musical semiotics, jazz analysis, and concert music by African American composers. These interests are explored in articles in Black Music Research Journal, Perspectives of New Music, and The American Music Research Center Journal.

Michael Birenbaum Quintero is a Mellon Postdoctoral Fellow at the Peabody Conservatory and the Department of Anthropology at Johns Hopkins University and Assistant Professor of Music at Bowdoin College beginning in 2010. His current research examines the politics of intra-diasporic musical encounters, focusing on Afro-Colombian activists who use music for political lobbying in African American institutions in Washington D.C.

Steve Swayne is an Associate Professor of Music at Dartmouth College. He has received fellowships from the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation and the National Endowment for the Humanities that have helped him pursue research on American music. His book How Sondheim Found His Sound was published in 2005 (University of Michigan Press; paperback, 2007), and he is currently writing a study of the life, times, and music of William Schuman (Oxford University Press).
