Military Education and National Policy

By John W. Masland and Laurence I. Radway

This is an examination of the role of the military in the formulation of our national policies and an evaluation of the education of military officers for participation in political and economic decisions. The authors present a forthright analysis of military responsibility in policy-making, the growth of education for policy roles, the form and content of that education and its relation to the over-all duties of the armed forces.

Theory and Reality in Public International Law

By Charles de Visscher, translated by P. E. Corbett

A brilliant analysis of the relation between politics and law in international affairs. The author, a former judge of the International Court of Justice, traces the growth of the modern state and its law, discusses power and the law on the world scene, treaties, recourse to arms, and other fundamental institutions, and points out the areas in which law can play a useful role. Published for the Center of International Studies of Princeton University.

The Growth of Public Employment in Great Britain

By Moses Abramovitz and Vera Eliasberg

Here is a study of the growth of government as shown by its employment. The authors survey 19th century developments, systematically trace the trends in public employment from 1891 to 1950, and finally compare the experience of Great Britain with that of the United States. The value of the work is enhanced by the fact that the authors sketch in the intellectual, political, and economic context, and help to account for their findings by presenting tentative hypotheses. Published for the National Bureau of Economic Research.
