

People in Political Science

Melinda Gann Hall, professor of political science, University of Wisconsin–Milwaukee.

John Hird, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

M. Njeri Jackson, associate professor with tenure, department of political science and public administration, Virginia Commonwealth University.

William D. Kay, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, Northeastern University.

Scott Keeter, professor, department of political science and public administration, Virginia Commonwealth University.

Stephen K. Ma, associate professor of political science, California State University, Los Angeles.

Brent F. Nelsen, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, Furman University.

Jaime A. Regalado, professor of political science, California State University, Los Angeles.

Roberto Alejandro Rivera, associate professor with tenure, University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

David A. Rochefort, professor, department of political science, Northeastern University.

Kamol Somvichian, professor of political science, University of La Verne (CA).

Kathy Smith, professor of politics, Wake Forest University.

Clifford L. Staten, associate professor of political science, Indiana University Southeast.

Aristide Tessitore, associate professor of political science, Furman University.

David P. Weinstein, associate professor of politics, Wake Forest University.

Leonard Williams, professor of political science, Manchester College (IN).

Christopher Wlezien, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, University of Houston.

Retirements

Arthur Kalleberg, professor emeritus, department of political science, University of Missouri–Columbia.

Visiting and Temporary Positions

Susan Dicklich, visiting assistant professor, department of government and international studies, University of South Carolina, 1995–96.

Raymond Duch, associate professor of political science, University of Houston, is a visiting fellow at the Hoover Institution, Stanford University, fall 1995.

Eduardo Honold, visiting assistant professor of political science, Bates College, 1995–97.

Atsushi Ishida, visiting instructor, department of political science, Emory University; formerly University of Chicago.

Margaret P. Karns, professor of political science, and director, Center for International Programs, University of Dayton, will be visiting professor, Johns Hopkins Center for Chinese and American Studies, Nanjing, China.

Ronald King, associate professor of political science, Tulane University, was a Fulbright lecturer at Babes-Bolyai University, Romania, during the spring semester 1995.

Patrick Peritore, associate professor of political science, University of Missouri–Columbia will be visiting professor of political science, University of Auckland, New Zealand, 1995–96.

Raphael J. Sonenshein, professor, department of political science, California State University, Fullerton, has received a joint appointment as a visiting scholar, Center for Multiethnic and Transnational Studies and department of political science, University of Southern California, 1995–96.

Judith H. Stiehm

Judith H. Stiehm, visiting research scholar, Peacekeeping Institute, U.S. Army War College.

Robert Stubbings, visiting assistant professor, department of government and international affairs, University of South Carolina; formerly Indiana University.

Barry Tadlock, visiting assistant professor, department of political science, Ohio University.

Awards

American Council of Learned Societies

The ACLS has recently announced the results of grant competitions in several programs for 1994–95. The following political scientists were recipients of grants for East European Studies or Chinese Studies:

East European Studies

Oliver Avens, assistant professor of politics, Princeton University, Postdoctoral Fellowship;

Elizabeth E. Kiss, assistant professor of politics, Princeton University, Postdoctoral Fellowship;

John W. Schiemann, department of political science, Columbia University, Dissertation Fellowship;

Trevor L. Wysong, department of political science, University of Maryland–College Park, Predissertation Travel Grant.

Chinese Studies

Pierre F. Landry, department of political science, University of Michigan, Dissertation Research Fellow;

Christopher A. McNally, department of political science, University of Washington; Dissertation Research Fellow.

Association for Politics and the Life Sciences

The Association for Politics and the Life Sciences meeting in conjunction with the American Political Science Association annual meeting in Chicago honored Glen-don Schubert, professor of political science, University of Hawaii, with a Career Achievement Award. Schubert, one of the founders of the Association, was honored for his lifetime of contributions as a pioneer in the study of ethology and politics. Among his many recent publications in the area are Evolutionary Politics, and Sexual Politics and Political Feminism.

National Humanities Center Fellows

The following political scientists have been named fellows of the National Humanities Center for 1995–96.

Robert Keohane, Center for International Affairs, Harvard University

Elizabeth E. Kiss, department of politics, Princeton University

David G. Strand, department of political science, Dickinson College

National Research Council Fellowships

The National Research Council has announced the names of 100 recipients of fellowships designed to increase the number of faculty members from underrepresented minority groups. Five political science students were among the winners. They include:

Nikol G. Alexander, Rutgers University;

Alethia E. Jones, Yale University; Maria K. Sanchez, University of Texas at Austin;

Lorraine Mora, University of Chicago; and

Katherine Tate, Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences

Samuel H. Beer Dissertation Prize

The British Politics Group's 1995 Samuel H. Beer Dissertation Prize has been awarded to two outstanding dissertations in the field of British Politics. The winners are: Cynthia Lorraine Irvin, currently a member of the department of political science at the University of Kentucky, for "Paramilitary Politics in Parliamentary Democracies: Militant Nationalism in Ireland and Spain," and Nikolaos Zahariadis, a member of the department of political science at SUNY–New Paltz for "The Political Economy of Privatization in Britain and France."

Other Awards

Jack Barlow, assistant professor of political science, Juniata College, received the college's Junior Faculty Award for Teaching Excellence for 1995.

Maria Chang, associate professor, University of Nevada–Reno, received a two year research fellowship from the Chiang Ching-Kuo Foundation to support her writing a book length manuscript entitled: "The Dragon Awakes: Chinese Conceptions of Nation and Nationalism."

Michael Genovese, professor of political science, Loyola Marymount University, received the Loyola Marymount University President's Distinguished Teaching Award in 1995.

Leslie Hill, assistant professor of political science, Bates College, was awarded an Aaron Diamond Post Doctoral Fellowship for 1995–96 and 1996–97 for the Graduate Faculty of the New School for Social Research.

Joseph A. Melusky, professor and chair, department of history and political science, Saint Francis College (PA), was named the recipient of the Saint Francis College National Alumni Association's Distinguished Faculty Award (1995).

Glen A. Halva-Neubauer, Dana Assistant Professor of Political Science, Furman University, received a Certificate of Merit from the National Academic Advising Association.

Katy Harriger, associate professor of politics, Wake Forest University, has been named a William C. Friday Fellow for Human Relations. The Fellowships, initiated and supported by the Blumenthal Foundation of Charlotte, recognize and develop emerging leaders from many different backgrounds across the state of North Carolina.

Mary Hepburn, professor, Carl Vinson Institute of Government, University of Georgia, and Ed Jackson, professor, Carl Vinson Institute of Government, University of Georgia were among the winners of the Walter Barnard Hill Awards for Distinguished Achievement in Public Service. Hepburn was further recognized as this year's Distinguished Public Service Fellow, the highest honor one can attain in the university's public service program.

Joseph Marbach, assistant professor, department of political science, Seton Hall University and Suzanne U. Samuels, assistant professor, Seton Hall University, have been awarded research grants by the Seton Hall University Research Council. The Council provides seed funding to faculty to help initiate scholarly or scientific research which is expected to lead to a publication, presentation, or grant proposal.

Gerald Pomper, professor, department of political science, Rutgers University, has received two awards from the Political Organizations and Parties Organized Section of the APSA. Pomper was selected for the Samuel Eldersveld Career

Achievement Award in recognition of outstanding lifetime contributions, and for the Jack Walker Award for his article, "From Confusion to Clarity," recognized for its lasting influence on the field.

Jewell L. Prestage, dean, Benjamin Banneker Honors College, Prairie View A&M University, was honored at the 1995 Midwest Political Science Association annual meeting with a "Roundtable in Honor of Jewell Prestage." Prestage was also presented with a certificate "recognizing a lifetime of scholarship and service to political science."

Charles R. Shipan, assistant professor of political science, University of Iowa, received the James N. Murray Teaching Award, given annually to one junior faculty member at the University of Iowa.

William A. Taggart, professor, department of government, New Mexico State University, received the El Paso Natural Gas Foundation Faculty Achievement Award in 1994–95 for outstanding university teaching. It is the most prestigious teaching award in the university and is awarded to three faculty each year.

David Webber, associate professor of political science, University of Missouri–Columbia, received a Congressional Research Fellowship from the U.S. Capitol Historical Society for 1995–96.

Leonard Weinberg, professor, department of political science, University of Nevada–Reno, received a Guggenheim Foundation grant to support his ongoing research on violent American and European radical right political groups. The award is shared with Jeffrey Kaplan, University of Alaska.

Myron Weiner, Ford International Professor of Political Science, department of political science, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, was chosen as the winner of the School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London's Edgar Graham Book Prize for 1994, in honor of his book The Child and the State in India: Child Labor and Education Policy in Comparative Perspective. The award is given every two years for a work of original scholarship on agricultural and/or industrial development in Asia and/or Africa.

In Memoriam

J. William Davis

Texas Tech University Professor Emeritus J. William Davis died on May 20, 1995, in Lubbock, Texas, at age 86. Survivors include his wife of 62 years, Edwena, two sons, James and Donald, and a daughter, Carolyn.

Bill Davis joined the Texas Tech faculty as an Instructor in 1938. Before his retirement in 1974, he served as Department of Political Science Chairperson from 1944 to 1964. During 1957–1958, he was President of the Southwestern Social Science Association. Bill Davis was an expert on the Texas Constitution, serving from 1957 to 1961 on the Citizens Advisory Committee on Constitutional Revision and on many other state and local boards and commissions concerned with state constitution or local charter revisions. He published articles on both topics and wrote the definitive work on the Texas Lieutenant Governor (There Shall be A Lieutenant Governor, 1967).

J. William Davis received his B.A. degree from Texas A&M University (1928) and his Ph.D. from the University of Texas (1940). Before joining Texas Tech, he taught high school for seven years and served as an instructor at Schreiner Institute, Texas A&M, and the University of Texas. At Texas Tech, he served on the then Faculty Advisory Committee and was chairman of the 1950–1954 Self-Evaluation Committee. He was for a time Chairman of the Board of Trustees of St. John's United Methodist Church. He received the Liberty Bell award from the Lubbock County Bar Association.

As important as his contributions to state government and to Texas Tech, Bill Davis is best remembered for his contributions to intercollegiate athletics, for which he had a special love. At Texas Tech, he served on the Athletic Council for 23 years (1948–1971). He served as both Vice-President and President of the Southwest Conference, and was Vice-President of the NCAA from 1967 to 1971. He is known as the "Father of the National Letter of Intent," the most important device for limiting and regulating college recruiting. Few professors have the unique opportunity afforded Bill Davis, of transferring their academic skills to other institutions.

On the occasion of his retirement, Bill Davis's long-time colleague, the late S.M. Kennedy, wrote the following: "Dr. Davis has been a willing listener, a quiet and effective counselor to thousands of students. He is especially remembered as one who was a source of inspiration and encouragement to his students, both in their student and later their professional careers. He also has displayed consistently a superb talent for not intruding into the lives and judgments of his students while retaining an active interest in their development, and willingness to contribute wise counsel when sought."

On his retirement in 1974, Bill Davis made the initial contribution to the J. William Davis Scholarship Endowment. He and his many friends, colleagues, and former students continued to add to it, and dozens of political science students benefitted from his generosity during the last 20 years. Donations in his memory may be made to that fund.

Clarke E. Cochran
Texas Tech University

Phillip Monypenny

As a teacher, scholar, and administrator at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign for 37 years, Phillip Monypenny made enormous contributions to the Department of Political Science at Illinois and to the lives and minds of a great many students and colleagues. This influence continued into his retirement years, and it surely will extend beyond his death,