Journal of the Society for American Music

Journal of the Society for American Music (JSAM) is an international, peer-reviewed journal that explores all aspects of American music and music in the Americas. JSAM is dedicated to supporting scholarship that transcends disciplinary boundaries, cutting across historical musicology, music theory, ethnomusicology, cultural theory, and American studies. JSAM encourages international dialogue across disciplines. The journal features articles, reviews of books, recordings, and multimedia items, and explorations of special topics.

Tamar Barzel is Assistant Professor of Ethnomusicology at Wellesley College. Her research interests include experimentalism, jazz, blues and blues-based idioms, “New York Noise,” and Jewish and African American cultural studies, especially with regard to intellectual history, diasporic identity, and modernism. She is currently working on a book titled Downtown and Disorderly: “Radical Jewish Culture” on Manhattan’s Avant-Garde Music Scene.

John Brackett lives in Chapel Hill, North Carolina. His book John Zorn: Tradition and Transgression was published by Indiana University Press in 2008.

Paul Christiansen, who previously taught at the University of California, Davis, and Palacký University in Olomouc, Czech Republic, is currently Assistant Professor of Music at the University of Southern Maine. His research, focusing primarily on Czech music, Haydn, and music in the media, has appeared in the New Grove Dictionary of Music and Musicians (7th ed.), Plainsong and Medieval Music, Echo, Notes, Journal of Musicological Research, and Nineteenth-Century Music.

Richard Crawford, Hans T. David Distinguished University Professor of Musicology Emeritus, taught at the University of Michigan from 1962 to 2003. He is author of America’s Musical Life: A History (W. W. Norton, 2001, 2005). Editor-in-chief of the American Musicological Society’s Music of the United States of America (MUSA) series published by A-R Editions, he is working on a biography of George Gershwin. He attended his first major league baseball game at Briggs Stadium, Detroit, in 1943.

Robin Elliott is the Jean A. Chalmers Chair in Canadian Music and the Director of the Institute for Canadian Music in the Faculty of Music at the University of Toronto, and a Senior Fellow at Massey College. Before returning to Canada in 2002, he was on the faculty at University College Dublin for six years. His recently published articles include studies of Emma Albani, Istvan Anhalt, Margaret Atwood, k.d. lang, and Glenn Gould.

Phil Ford is Assistant Professor of musicology at the Indiana University Jacobs School of Music. His work on cold war culture, postwar popular music, and counter-cultural intellectual history has appeared in Musical Quarterly, College Music Symposium, Jazz Perspectives, Journal of Musicological Research, Journal of Musicology, and Representations.

William Gibbons is completing his Ph.D. at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill with a dissertation titled “Eighteenth-Century Opera and the Construction of National Identity in France, 1875–1918,” supported by a Mellon/ACLS Dissertation Completion Fellowship. His articles have appeared in American Music, Current Musicology, Intersections: Canadian Journal of Music, and Music and the Moving Image.

Kip Lornell teaches courses in American music as well as ethnomusicology at the George Washington University. He has been publishing articles, essays, and books about vernacular music in the United States since 1973. His most recent book, coauthored with Charles Stephenson, is The Beat! Go Go Music from Washington, D.C. (University Press of Mississippi, 2009).

Jeffrey Magee is Associate Professor and Chair of Musicology, as well as a Faculty Affiliate in Theater, at the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign. His first book, The Uncrowned King of Swing: Fletcher Henderson and Big Band Jazz (Oxford, 2005), won the Society for American Music's Irving Lowens Award. His current project is a book on "Irving Berlin and the theater" for Oxford University Press's Broadway Legacies series. He is the former secretary of the Society for American Music.

Kiri Miller is Assistant Professor of Music at Brown University. She holds a Ph.D. in music (ethnomusicology) from Harvard University and is the author of Traveling Home: Sacred Harp Singing and American Pluralism (University of Illinois Press, 2008). Her current book project concerns virtual performance, including case studies on Grand Theft Auto, Guitar Hero, Rock Band, and music pedagogy on YouTube.

Patrick Warfield is Assistant Professor of Musicology at the University of Maryland. He holds a Ph.D. in musicology from Indiana University with a dissertation on the early career of John Philip Sousa. He has published on the musical life of late-nineteenth-century Washington, D.C., and is currently preparing an edition of six Sousa marches for the series Music of the United States of America.

Jeffrey Wright is a doctoral candidate in musicology at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. His research focuses on the compositions of Samuel Barber written during the composer's tenure in the army. He is currently writing his dissertation, titled "The Enlisted Composer: Samuel Barber's Career, 1942–1945."
