

Amílcar Cabral

Revolutionary Leadership and People's War

PATRICK CHABAL

The first full-scale political biography of Amílcar Cabral who, as head of Guinea-Bissau's nationalist movement, became one of Africa's foremost revolutionary leaders. Drawing on unpublished sources, interviews in Portugal, Guinea-Bissau and Cape Verde, as well as Cabral's own writings, Dr Chabal examines the reasons for the success of the PAIGC and sets it in its historical context. As well as being a major scholarly biography, this book is also an important contribution to the study of political leadership and to the analysis of the relationship between people's wars and revolutions.

Volkskapitalisme

Class, Capital and Ideology in the Development of Afrikaner Nationalism, 1935-1948

DAN O'MEARA

An analysis of the development of Afrikaner nationalism which challenges the common assumption that Apartheid conflicts with the colour-blind logic of capitalism. Far from being a monolithic movement of an ethnically mobilised group, Afrikaner nationalism emerged as an alliance of conflicting class forces during a period of capitalist accumulation and of transition from competitive to monopoly capitalism.

The Settler Economies

Studies in the Economic History of Kenya and Southern Rhodesia, 1900-1963

PAUL MOSLEY

The first comprehensive history of the settler economies of Kenya and Southern Rhodesia. Dr Mosley argues against two current opposing theories, those held by apologists for colonialism and 'underdevelopment theorists'. He argues that black farmers were by no means squeezed out of existence by competition from whites, and industrial development was not unduly hampered by the unequal distribution of income within the colonies.

Essays on the Political Economy of Rural Africa

ROBERT H. BATES

A collection of five essays on the political economy of rural Africa, covering the pre-colonial, colonial and post-colonial periods. Themes discussed include the origins of 'traditional' states, the causes of divergent patterns of agriculture, the fate of the peasantry since independence and the agricultural policies of the independent states. In considering these topics the author advances a form of political economy based upon rational choice analysis.

The Journal of African History publishes articles and reviews ranging widely over the African past from the Late Stone Age to the present. Since its establishment in 1960, it has aimed to reflect all the major interests of historians of Africa, and has included contributions from specialists in a variety of disciplines, including archaeology, botany and comparative philology. Recent issues have devoted increasing space to economic history and to the colonial period. The journal seeks to present the results of new research in the broader context of historical change whether on a regional or continental scale. Contributions are welcomed in English or French. The contents include research articles, review articles and book reviews.

Volume 24, Number 2, June 1983

This is a Special Issue on the history of the family in Africa. It contains articles selected by two guest editors, Dr. Shula Marks and Dr. Richard Rathbone.

The articles are selected from papers originally presented to a conference held at the School of Oriental and African Studies under the joint auspices of the School and the British Social Science Research Council, in September 1981. The conference grew out of the editors' concern that the history of the family, which had become so lively and important an area of study in Europe and America since the 1960s, was being almost totally neglected in Africa.

The editors hope to stimulate research on a range of questions which could be fruitfully explored in the African context, and which could possibly feed into the wider historiography on the family in Britain, America and Europe.

Three Indispensable Guides to Contemporary Affairs from HOLMES & MEIER

Over the years since their introduction, the series of annual reference works Africa Contemporary Record and Middle East Contemporary Survey have been highly praised and widely relied on as indispensable guides to social, political, and economic events and developments in the areas on which they focus. Now reference information of the same high quality and comprehensiveness is being made available for another dynamic, vitally important part of the world: Latin America and the Caribbean.

Each volume in all three series presents detailed country-by-country reviews as well as compilations of important documents and statistics. Leading scholars, journalists, and other area experts contribute essays on crucial regional topics. In addition, each new volume contains extensive cross-references to previous volumes in the same series, and each is rewritten completely every year to create an invaluable ongoing reference library.

Latin America and Caribbean Contemporary Record

Volume I: 1981-82

edited by Jack W. Hopkins

This first volume of the new series opens with a regional overview by editor Jack W. Hopkins, followed by individual essays on such issues as arms control in Latin America, the economic and business outlook for the region, implementation of the Panama Canal treaties, current development efforts in the Amazon basin, U.S.-Mexican relations, and U.S. policy toward the Caribbean during the Carter and Reagan administrations.

Africa Contemporary Record

Annual Survey and Documents

Volume XIV: 1981-82

edited by Colin Legum

"Of all the many works of reference devoted to Africa, (this) is the only one that is worth buying in its latest edition year after year."

—The Economist

"The single most important reference work in its field... The entire series stands as an invaluable tool for the intelligent understanding of events in Africa."

—Orbis

Volume XIV/1,280 pp./$175.00

ISBN 0-8419-0552-5/ISSN 0065-3845

A limited number of Volumes I-XIII is available, each priced at $175.00.

The country-by-country reviews in Part Two focus on current political events, significant social and economic developments, and key figures in politics and society in each nation in the region. Parts Three and Four contain documents and statistics, the latter on such items as population, economic performance, imports and exports, trade and commodity prices, external debt, foreign aid, and investment. The final section provides an annotated listing of current books on the region.

THE JOURNAL OF MODERN AFRICAN STUDIES

The Journal offers a quarterly survey of politics, economics, and related topics in contemporary Africa.

The main emphasis is upon the peoples and policies, the problems and progress of this dynamic and disparate continent; upon the many societies that are evolving rather than the essential characteristics of the old; upon the present, not on the more distant past. The best current work is sought from specialists in different academic disciplines, whose contributions can illuminate and cross-fertilise one another.

The Journal seeks to promote a deeper understanding of what is happening in Africa today. It is intended for both the political scientist and the practical politician, the administrator and the advocate, the economist and the educator, the banker and the business man, the diplomat and the technocrat, the civil servant and the nationalist leader. All have something to contribute to these pages and, it is hoped, much to learn from them.

Editorial policy avoids commitment to any political viewpoint or ideology, whether imperialism, pan-Africanism, capitalism, socialism, or nationalism. Such concepts, however, have relevance to the modern African situation, and merit serious discussion, often from several different points of view, in order that controversial issues may be fairly examined.
