

PENNINGTON'S PRINCIPLES OF COMPANY LAW

By

ROBERT R. PENNINGTON, LL.B.

Solicitor; Reader at the Law Society's School of Law

This new book presents company law as a set of living and developing rules essential for the carrying on of commercial activities by persons in co-operation.

"Mr. Pennington is extremely readable and his book is one of the small number which, although written mainly for the student, are sufficiently practical and comprehensive to be used by the practitioner . . . not a page is wasted on reproducing material which the reader will already have at hand."

Solicitors' Journal

" . . . company law is not a dry, complicated and static structure, but is a living and developing body of rules, and his treatment of the subject amply demonstrates this belief.

The exposition is careful and painstaking. The easy style of expression, and development from one related theme to another throughout the work, sustains the reader's interest . . . The subject matter is refreshingly free from large portions of mere extracts from the Companies Act, 1948; on the one hand, there is considerable and welcome discussion of important cases bearing on company law principles . . . no case of current importance has escaped accurate treatment . . . it fully deserves and will find a secure and valued place not only among students but also among accountancy and legal practitioners." Accountancy

JAMES'S INTRODUCTION TO ENGLISH LAW

FOURTH EDITION

BY

PHILIP S. JAMES, M.A.

of the Inner Temple; Barrister-at-Law; Professor of English Law in the University of Leeds; formerly a Fellow of Exeter College, Oxford and a Research Fellow of Yale University, U.S.A.

This edition follows the same successful pattern as its predecessors, but incorporates all the recent changes and developments in the law. It is the ideal book for those interested in the broad outline of the law. First year University students, as well as young men and women studying for professional examinations, will find the book of great assistance to them, while it is also suitable for study in schools by sixth forms, by W.E.A. classes and by students in commercial and technical colleges and even the man in the street.
