

P-04 - EFFECTIVENESS OF EDUCATION AND LIFE SKILLS APPROACH TO PUBLISHING INFORMATION ON THE PREVENTION OF ADDICTION IN THE FIRST YEAR OF HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS

K.Amirian<sup>1</sup>, M.Shafiei Amiri<sup>2</sup>

<sup>1</sup>Psychology in Islamic Azad University, Roudehen Branch, Tehran, <sup>2</sup>Psychology, Islamic Azad University & Young Researchers Club, Roudehen Branch, Babol, Iran

Introduction: In the past three decades the world with shocking statistics on the prevalence of substance abuse in the community has faced over the years have proven the most effective methods of treatment would be associated with a high rate of recurrent costs and reasonable choice thus preventing provides for secure physical and mental.

Aim: The purpose of this study the effectiveness of education and life skills approach to publishing information on the prevention of addiction in the first year of high school students is the falcon city.

Methods: The semi-experimental research design with pretest - posttest control group is a cluster sampling in two high school boys and 50 girls randomly selected two groups of 25 people (test and control) groups, and data research The mean, standard deviation and two-way analysis of variance were analyzed.

Results: Results indicated that life skills training, publications, and a negative attitude toward drug testing are among the groups.

Conclusions: According to research findings that addiction is a very big problem and its treatment is very costly primary prevention can be prevented and the high costs of drug addiction was.