E. W. TRUEMAN DICKEN

The Crucible of Love

63s

A Study of the Mysticism of St Teresa and St John of the Cross

"Mr Trueman Dicken has fulfilled a very useful purpose . . . He brings to his own analysis a precise judgment and a constant conviction that prayer (even, and indeed most of all, contemplative prayer) is the norm of Christian life. Thus his exact summary of the saints' actual teaching and his careful discussion of its sources in biblical and patristic tradition lead him to a final chapter called 'Is Contemplation for all?' . . . Of the value of his achievement there can be no question."

NICOLAS ZERNOV

The Russian Religious Renaissance of the Twentieth Century

35s

A Study of the Russian Intelligentsia, particularly Bulgakov, Struve, Berdyaev and Frank.

" . . . an excellent account of the Russian Orthodox Church's stormy and unhappy journey through this century . . . brightened by accounts of leading men and women . . . who shine with a saintliness which only the oppressed seem to be able to acquire".

ADRIAN HASTINGS

One and Apostolic

30s

A sacramental eucharistic communion guarded by episcopal and Petrine authority – that is the vision of the Church which I have seen ever more clearly in the writing of this book. Anglican theologians have really helped me to see it.
