Mammal Review is an official publication of the Mammal Society, dedicated to the promotion of mammalian studies. It is not intended for the publication of the results of original research but rather as a secondary journal, carrying reviews of, and reports on, any aspect of mammalogy. It also serves to report the proceedings of the Society's Symposia, which again are of a review nature.

Nowadays there are relatively few people who study a taxonomic group per se; many more become interested in the groups through the pursuit of one of the sub-disciplines such as ecology, behaviour, anatomy, physiology, genetics, etc. The journal therefore has an interdisciplinary nature and is intended for a wide readership, both amateur and professional. Contributions which promote the dissemination of knowledge of mammals or encourage their study are invited, particularly those which describe work in progress in the various disciplines and which help to bridge interdisciplinary gaps. Reports on the status and distribution of mammalian species are also welcomed.

Subscription Information

Mammal Review is published quarterly. Subscription rates for 1992 are £71.00 (UK), £74.00 (overseas) and US$125.00 (USA & Canada) post free.
