THE PHILOSOPHY FORUM

Edited by Rubin Gotesky and Ervin Laszlo

Publishes articles of philosophical significance on problems of direct human contact, rather than on problems of a wholly technical nature. The objective of the journal is to develop discussion on a philosophical level, on issues of primary importance to mankind today; and to have such issues discussed not merely by philosophers, but by scientists, humanists and others with a philosophical interest.

The Mind/Brain Identity Theory

Edited by C. V. Borst

A collection of articles concerning the most recent philosophical theory on the relation between mind and body. The Identity Theory in its present form—which utilises the notion of contingent identity—dates only from the mid-1950s. Thus it has been possible to include most of the major papers so far written on it, including the statements by U. T. Place and J. J. C. Smart.

A volume in the Controversies in Philosophy series

262 pp 40s Papermac 18s

Reason and Right

A Critical Examination of the Moral Philosophy of Richard Price

W. D. Hudson

Richard Price is recognised as the foremost exponent of the ethical viewpoint called rational intuitionism. This book is a critical study of his moral philosophy from the point of view of contemporary analytical philosophy.

224 pp 90s July 30th

The Philosophy of John Stuart Mill

Alan Ryan

Mill is usually thought of as an eclectic and unsystematic writer whose views on freedom contradict his views on moral right, whose views on causation contradict his views on syllogistic inference and so on. This book, however, demonstrates that Mill saw his views as part of a systematic defence of empiricist epistemology and utilitarian ethics, and was to a large extent successful in offering a coherent and connected defence of this system.

New Studies in Ethics
Summer Titles

Kant's Moral Philosophy

H. B. Acton

An analysis of the main themes of Kant's moral philosophy, showing their treatment in the work of later philosophers. The author adds his own critical assessment of both Kant and his critics from the point of view of contemporary analytical philosophy.

80 pp 10s

Ethical Naturalism

J. Kemp

An introduction to ethical naturalism through the work of Hobbs and Hume. The author's aim is to show precisely what views Hobbs and Hume held respectively and to bring out what is of continuing interest and significance in their work.

64 pp 10s

Axiological Ethics

J. N. Findlay

An important survey of the writings of the leading exponents of axiological ethics, namely Brentano, Meinong, G. E. Moore, Hastings Rashdall, W. D. Ross, Scheler and Hartmann. The author expounds their views and adds his own assessment of value theory.

The Collected Works of Jeremy Bentham

This series was inaugurated in 1968 with two volumes of Bentham's correspondence. The two volumes now announced are the first in a section devoted to Principles of Legislation.

An Introduction to the Principles of Morals and Legislation

JEREMY BENTHAM

*edited by J. H. BURNS and
H. L. A. HART*

This work is important and valuable as a statement of Bentham's utilitarian principles and as an exemplification of the method of analysis he adopted.
0 485 13211 7 £6

Of Laws in General

JEREMY BENTHAM

edited by H. L. A. HART

In its profound analysis of some of the most fundamental problems in the theory of law and the analysis of human acts, and in its anticipation of modern deontic logic, this work may well have a claim to be regarded as the most original of all Bentham's voluminous writings. 0 485 13210 9 £6

BERTRAND RUSSELL

John Watling

At the time of his death in 1970, Bertrand Russell was regarded as one of the most remarkable figures of his time. In this unique contribution to the study of his philosophy, John Watling describes the development of Russell's thought in the years before 1920, when he did his most important work, and brings out the mutual influence of his views on Logic, psychology, epistemology and metaphysics.

Kant's Moral Religion

By ALLEN W. WOOD

Contrary to most critics, Professor Wood here contends that Kant's doctrine of religious belief is consistent with his best critical thinking, and, in fact, that the "moral arguments"—along with the faith they justify—are an integral part of Kant's critical philosophy.

The New Science of Giambattista Vico

Translated from the third edition
by THOMAS GODDARD BERGIN and
MAX HAROLD FISCH
Revised and Abridged

The "New Science" remains, in the words of the translators, 'one of the few works of original genius in the entire history of social theory'. It is the most impressive attempt before Comte at a comprehensive science of human society and the most complete class-struggle analysis prior to Marx.

Spinoza's Metaphysics

AN ESSAY IN INTERPRETATION

E. M. Curley

In this provocative and original interpretation of Spinoza, the author focuses on such controversial topics as the doctrines of substance and mode, God's causality, necessity, and the relation between the attributes. His reconstructions clarify abstruse elements of the Spinozistic system, and offer intriguing interpretations of the contemporary views he employs to explain Spinoza's intentions. 75/- Harvard University Press

An Autobiography

R. G. Collingwood

'Professor Collingwood . . . writes with passion and elegance the story of his mental life: and because he is a brilliant and gifted man, with the widest sympathies of mind, that story reflects some of the profoundest intellectual difficulties of our age . . . it is a document of our time' (Spectator). The hardcover edition remains in print at 28/-.

Law, Morality and Religion in a Secular Society

Basil Mitchell

Should the law be concerned only with actions which harm individuals, or may it be used to protect the morality and essential institutions of a society? Professor Mitchell traces the differing views of Lord Devlin, Professor H. L. A. Hart, and others, to their origin in fundamental differences about the scope and nature of morality. This edition replaces the 1967 hard-cover edition. 7/- Oxford Paperbacks

The Freedom of the Will

J. R. Lucas

The Freedom of the Will can now be established. Although the development of the mathematical sciences used to be regarded as inimical to our view of ourselves as free agents, two discoveries of the present century—Quantum Mechanics and Gödel's Theorem—have shown not only that there is no reason to suppose we are not free but that there cannot be. 30/-

Models of Thinking

FRANK GEORGE

In this study the more logical types of human thinking are analysed, such as the ability to abstract and the development of concepts. Professor George describes the features that have long been regarded as central to thinking by experimental and theoretical psychologists and places a greater emphasis on the part played by language in cognitive affairs.

Meaning in the Arts

LOUIS ARNAUD REID

Explores in a new way the crucial problem of aesthetic meaning. The thesis of embodiment (rather than expression) as a key idea is worked and tested out in different arts and most of the seminal topics of aesthetics are lucidly discussed.

The Subject of Consciousness

C. O. EVANS

Attempts to account for the self from one's own case have led either to variants of the Pure Ego Theory or to variants of the Serial Theory. The author disputes this too easy dichotomy by presenting a third alternative. He develops a theory which is at once simple in conception and powerful in its ability to overcome the objections against the traditional theories.

Contemporary American Philosophy

Edited by J. E. SMITH

Second Series

The aim of this book is to present a cross-section of philosophical thinking in America at present. No one type of philosophy, either with respect to method or viewpoint, has guided the editor in inviting contributors. Rather, an effort has been made to show how rich and varied a philosophical diet is available. Naturalism and Idealism, personalism and pragmatism, analysis and speculative philosophy are all represented, and the ideas of fourteen, junior as well as senior, philosophers are included.

Ethics and Christianity

KEITH WARD

This book explores the logic of Christian ethics in the light of contemporary moral philosophy. As it expounds a specific moral viewpoint which has been neglected in much recent discussion, it will be important to moral philosophers; it will also be of interest to theologians, as an outline of the basic framework of Christian ethics, offering a constructive discussion of revelation and authority.

FREUD AND PHILOSOPHY

An Essay on Interpretation

by Paul Ricoeur

Translated by Denis Savage

This book reveals Ricoeur the philosopher of language; Ricoeur the critic of Freud; and Ricoeur the theologian of religious symbol. The author is outstanding in all three roles, and the book that emerges is of rare profundity, enormous scope, and complete timeliness.

The first part of Freud and Philosophy, "Problematic", presents a profound and clear theory of signification, symbol, and interpretation. The second part, "A Reading of Freud", is required reading for anyone seriously interested in psychoanalysis. The third section includes a thoroughly audacious interpretation and criticism of Freud and a presentation of Ricoeur's own theory of symbol—particularly religious symbol—which places this study at the centre of contemporary debate over the sense of myth.

Paul Ricoeur is Professor of Philosophy at the University of Paris.
