ABOUT THE AUTHORS

BRADLEY C. CANON is an Associate Professor of Political Science at the University of Kentucky. During the 1972-73 academic year he was at the University of Wisconsin on a Ford Foundation Faculty Fellowship studying the impact of Supreme Court search and seizure decisions. He has focused on state supreme courts in a previous Law & Society Review article as well as in Polity and Midwest Journal of Political Science articles.

ROBERT E. CREW, JR. is Executive Director of the State of Minnesota's Governor's Commission on Crime Prevention and Control and Adjunct Professor of Political Science at the University of Minnesota.

ROGER A. HANSON is Assistant Professor of Political Science at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee. His fields of interest are political theory, public policy, and methodology. He has contributed to the Midwest Journal of Political Science and the Annals of the New York Academy of Sciences.

RICHARD O. HAWKINS is Assistant Professor of Sociology at Southern Methodist University. He received his doctorate in sociology at the University of Washington. He has recently taken over as the Criminal Justice Program Director. He is interested in the areas of deviant behavior, delinquency, and sociology of law.

J. WOODFORD HOWARD, JR. is a Professor and Chairman of the Political Science Department at The Johns Hopkins University. His fields of interest are public law, the judicial process, and law and society. His publications include Mr. Justice Murphy: A Political Biography (1968) and articles in the American Political Science Review, the Journal of Politics, the Journal of Public Law and the Vanderbilt Law Review. He is currently working on a study of litigation flow and role perceptions in U.S. Courts of Appeals.

NANCY JOSLYN is a third year law student in the College of Law, University of Illinois.

FRANK KOZIOL is a third year law student in the College of Law, University of Illinois.

ROBERT F. RICH is a Ph.D. candidate in political science at the University of Chicago. In association with the Fulbright Program, he studied at the Institute of Politics, Free University of Berlin as a German Government Fellow. He is interested in public policy and legal impact studies.

LEON S. ROBERTSON is Senior Behavioral Scientist in the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety. He is a co-author of Biology and Social Behavior and articles in medical, psychology and sociology journals. His primary interests are in biological factors in social behavior and in evaluation research.

H. LAURENCE ROSS is Professor of Law and Sociology at the University of Denver. He is author of Settled Out of Court, "Law, Science and Accidents", a number of other articles on legal impact and other topics in sociology.

RITA JAMES SIMON is Professor of Sociology and Law, and Research Professor of Communications at the University of Illinois. Other work that she has done in the sociology of law are monographs entitled The Jury and the Defense of Insanity, and Payment for Pain and Suffering: Who Wants What, When, and Why? (co-authored with Jeffrey O'Connell) and a reader entitled The Sociology of Law. In the February 1971 Law & Society Review she had an article entitled "Quantifying Burdens of Proof: A View from the Bench, the Jury and the Classroom."

PAUL E. (TED) SMITH is Assistant Professor and Director of Graduate Studies in Sociology at Southern Methodist University. He received his doctorate in sociology at the University of Washington. He was instrumental in the recent establishment of an interdisciplinary undergraduate major in Criminal Justice at SMU. His primary areas of interest include deviance, sociology of law, and the criminal justice system.

S. SIDNEY ULMER is Professor of Political Science in the University of Kentucky. He is the author of Military Justice and the Right to Counsel and Courts as Small and Not So Small Groups, both published in 1971. He is also the co-author of an earlier paper on the certiorari decisions of the Supreme Court which appeared in the May 1972 issue of this Review.