

NOTICE

The next issue of the American Slavic and East European Review, Vol. VII, No. 4, will contain the following articles:

Hans Heymann, Jr., Oil in Soviet-Western Relations in the Inter-war Years

David M. Lang, Griboedov's Last Years in Persia

Manfred Kridl, Adam Mickiewicz (1798–1855)

Czesław Miłosz, Mickiewicz and Modern Poetry

Czesław Zgorzelski, Adam Mickiewicz in the Light of Polish Postwar Criticism

● Special Offer to Readers of this Review

SLAVONIC ENCYCLOPEDIA

Edited by JOSEPH S. ROUCEK, Ph.D.

THE Slavonic Encyclopedia tries to open the door to the Slavonic world, the largest kindred group of people in the world, divided into several distinct nations, each with its own tongue, its national literature, its independent history, and its peculiar civilization—but all tied together by a general consciousness that they all belong to a single and great family of Slavonic peoples.

Their existence has been and will be of supreme importance to the course of world history, as indicated by the implications of such popular phrases as Europe behind the “iron curtain,” a “Sovietized Europe,” the “Pan-Slavonic Danger,” etc.

More important, however, will be such basic facts as the realization that there is a trend toward slower growth in Europe west of the USSR, while the Soviet population, together with other Slavic nations, has an enormous growth potential. The very fact that by 1970 Russia’s population will reach an estimated 225 million is a factor which must enter into all military, economic, strategic and other calculations of American statesmen.

This Encyclopedia covers the most important developments of the history of the Slavic peoples (including those living outside the territorial limits of the Slavic states as well as those who have joined the stream of America’s civilization as the “new” immigrants) and of the various ramifications of their contemporary life and problems.

Thousands of Entries.

All pertinent historical data.

Biographical sketches of important Slavonic personalities.

CONTRIBUTORS INCLUDE: Joseph C. Gidynski, Columbia University; John N. Hazard, Columbia University; Hans Kohn, Smith College; Clarence A. Manning, Columbia University; Griffith Taylor, University of Toronto; Dinko Tomasic, Indiana University; Eric E. Hirshler, Yale University; Emil Lengyel, New York University; Jan Lowenbach, Ministry of Education, Czechoslovakia; Clement S. Mihanovich, St. Louis University; Dmitri S. Von Mohrenschildt, Dartmouth College; John S. Reshetar, Jr., Harvard University; Henry E. Sigerist, M.D., Johns Hopkins University; Nicholas S. Timasheff, Fordham University; C. H. Andrusyshen, University of Saskatchewan; R. Baricevic, Professor of Slavistics, Zagreb; Thomas Capek, author; and others.

Appr. 1500 pp.

$18.50

Special high discounts for bulk classroom orders.

The regular price of this book is $18.50. Readers of this Review, however, are entitled to the Special Professional rate of per copy. Just use the special order coupon, or mention THE REVIEW when ordering.

ONLY $15.00

-----SPECIAL ORDER COUPON-----

PHILOSOPHICAL LIBRARY, Publishers
15 East 40th St., Dept. 314, New York 16, N. Y.
Please send me _____ copy(ies) of SLAVONIC ENCYCLOPEDIA, at the special professional rate of $15 per copy. Enclosed is $_____.
NAME _____
ADDRESS _____

-----Expedite Shipment by Enclosing Remittance-----