PART I.

	PAGE
I.—Petition to the Lord Chancellor	1
The mayor and commonalty had a day to appear before the Chancellor, and have kept it according to the King's commandment, and also have put in articles, answers, and rejoinders, and done all things that they ought to do. Prays that the matter may be ended.
II.—Shillingford to his Fellows at Exeter. [Draft Letter.]	3
He left Exeter on Friday, and came to London on Tuesday at seven o'clock, and laboured to make answer to the articles, which he sends for approval.
III.—Shillingford to his Fellows. [Draft Letter.] London, Oct. 30th, 1447	4
On 16th Oct. 1447, Richard Druell and Harry Dobyne rode out of Exeter to London, to keep the appearance for the City in the Quinzaine S. Michael. The Mayor left Oct. 24, and reached Shaftesbury on Wednesday night. On Saturday 28 Oct. he came to London and saw the Lord Chancellor. He describes his reception and interview. On Sunday 29 Oct. he had another interview with the Chancellor, and also with the Chief Justice, and again with the Chancellor.
IV.—Shillingford to his Fellows. London, 2 Nov. 1447	8
He has made a present of fish to the Chancellor. The cause was adjourned till Saturday. He has spoken about it to the Justice, who urges him to make a composition, which Shillingford refuses to initiate. The cause was again adjourned till Monday, when it came before the Chancellor and the two Justices. He describes the proceedings minutely. On Tuesday All Hallows Eve he received the answers to the City's articles, in which he is greatly libelled, desires money may be sent him, that the answers may be well understood and replied to, and that the Black Roll may be sent him.

V.—Shillingford to his Fellows. London, Sat. 11 Nov. 1447. [Draft Letter.]	18
He was at Lambeth with the Chancellor on Sunday the 5 Nov. 1447, and spoke with him about the Answers to the City's Articles. On Monday in the Exchequer Chamber the Chancellor amended the answers himself. On Tuesday the cause came on again, and he describes the proceedings. The other party are to shew their evidences on Sunday next.
VI.—Shillingford to his Fellows. London ? Nov. or Dec. 1447. [Draft Letter.]	22
Dowrish and Speere saw the Chancellor on the Sunday before his arrival. New bonds are ordered to be sealed to entreat for a composition till Candelmass. Dowrish and Speere were before the Chancellor on Monday; the cause was postponed. Shillingford arrived in London on Tuesday; he has not seen the Chancellor yet because he waits for the "buckhorn" which was to be presented. Upbraids one Germyn for his negligence in not sending it.
VII.—Shillingford to one of the Bishop's Counsel. Dec. 1447. [Draft Letter.]	24
Concerning the entreaty to be had at home under the new bonds. Prays him to fix a place, day, and time for the consideration of the matter, and expresses his desire for a "good end." A curious passage at the end has been struck out. See the note.
VIII.—Shillingford to Dowrish. Exeter, Wednesday, Eve of St. Thomas the Apostle, Dec. 20, 1447	25
Requesting him to help to make a good end of the matter; with him are Radford and Hengston and William Beef.
IX.—Shillingford to the Bishop. Exeter, 24 Dec. 1447. [Draft Letter.]	26
The Lords before whom the matter is "in compremys" have postponed it until Candelmass with a command that the parties should endeavour to agree at home, as appears by a letter lately sent by the Chancellor to the Bisshop. The Mayor and Commonalty are ready to agree. The City did not wish to dispute the Bishop's right to the Fee. The Church and Cemetery are distinct from the Fee, and not the same thing as it is now desired to be set up this last term, contrary to the Bishop's first answer to the City's articles. Begs he will endeavour to settle the affair according to the effect of divers bulls of supplications put in by the Mayor to the Lords, of which he sends copies.

X.—Instructions from Shillingford to his Deputy 24 Dec. 1447	29
Instructions to speak to the Bishop and deliver a letter from the Chancellor. He is to make excuses for the Mayor not bringing the letter himself. It is the Chancellor's command that "we intreat at home." The City is willing. The Mayor is hurt at some remarks of the Bishop's.
XI.—Instructions to Shillingford's Deputy going to the Bishop. (?) Dec. 1447 [Original and draft.]	31
He is to make his excuses for not coming to his Lordship at Chudleigh.
XII.—H. Webber, Priest, on behalf of the Bishop, to the Recorder (?) Chudleigh, 28 Dec. 1447	33
Thanks for good will expressed in the letter sent to him (the Bishop) on Sunday. The same day he had a long and diffuse letter from the Mayor of Exeter, stating that the Lords' command was that the matter shall be entreated at home in this vacation. The Bishop will order Copleston and Hendeston to be at Exeter at the next sessions of the peace for that purpose.
XIII.—Shillingford to his Fellows. London, 2 Feb. 1447-8. [Draft Letter.]	35
On Candelmas Eve he received their letter brought him by Harry Dobyne, which he has well understood. What to do he cannot yet be "redely avysed," but will do as best he can.
XIV.—Shillingford to his Fellows. 3 Feb. 1447-8. [Original and draft.]	36
The buckhorn was presented on Candlemas day. On that day he was with the Chancellor at mass and presented his candle to him, and "abode there to meat by my lord's commandment." Describes the scene and his conversations with the Chancellor about the cause.

XV.—The Mayor and Commonalty of Exeter to the Lord Chancellor. February 1447-8. [Draft Letter.]	39
Praying him to write to the Bishop and desire him to conform to the King's commandment, and to stay the suit at common law.
XVI.—The Archbishop of Canterbury to the Bishop of Exeter. Lambeth, 16 Feb. 1447-8	41
Begging him to refrain from proceeding at common law because the matter is by his labour and that of the Justices in course of settlement under the bonds that were made to Candelmas last. Trusts that a composition may be made, and if any difficult point arise the judges will settle it.
XVII.—The Chancellor to the Chief Justice	42
Urging him to use his influence with the Bishop for an entreaty to be had at home.
XVIII.—Instructions to Richard Druell, drawn by Shillingford. Lent, 1447-8. [Draft.]	42
Druell is to recommend the Mayor, &c. to the Lord Chancellor. Pray him to remember how the Mayor last departed from him, and specially of the communication had with him the Sunday morning before the Mayor departed in his "yunner chamber" at Lambeth. He abided till Tuesday, and had a letter to the Bishop of Exeter. Also tell him he sent his letter to the Bishop by John Hulle, John Coteler, and you Richard Druell. The Bishop sent Canon Kys to treat with the Mayor, who refused to treat with any one but the Bishop; but they agreed to refer matters to counsel on either side, and met at the Cathedral, Copleston, Hingston, and Wood for the Bishop, and Radford, Hody, Beef, and Dowrish for the City. No answer yet given to the City's articles. The Bishop sent word to the Mayor that he would be at Exeter to meet him. In the evening the Mayor waited on the Bishop. The Bishop spoke with him. The Mayor attended at the Cathedral on Monday morning "at 10 atte belle," and was assigned to come before the Bishop in the Chapter House. ? Lent, 1447-8.
XIX.—Shillingford to the Chancellor. Soon after 13 March 1447-8. [Draft Letter.]	50
The parties have been in treaty before Sir Richard Newton, Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, at Exeter, and also before the Bishop at Crediton. Hopes for a "gode end."

	PAGE
XX.—Shillingford to Druell. After Lent, 1447-8	51
Instructions to speak to the Chancellor upon the matter.
XXI.—Shillingford to his Deputy in London. Instructions to speak to the Chancellor. Soon after Easter, 1448	54
Desires more time to answer the Bishop's new articles. Search to be made among the public records for evidence. Since "our departyng from London" the canons have changed their conduct, and behave peacefully.
XXII.—A Memorandum sent by Shillingford to Speer in London, to be delivered to the Chancellor. After 10 April, 1448	59
Upon the breach at Tiverton between Radford and Hengston the Mayor spoke to Harry Webber, and the matter was put to the arbitration of Radford and Coplestone, but the entreaty is broken off again, he knows not why.
XXIII.—William Spere to Shillingford. After 19 April, 1448	61
Has arrived in London and delivered the Mayor's letter to the Chancellor to Radford, who said he would present it the next day, and would see the Chief Justice. The matter was on in the Common Pleas, and was postponed. Describes the scene at dinner, when the letter was delivered to the Chancellor, and reports fully upon the proceedings in London.
XXV.—Shillingford to his Fellows. (?) April, 1448.
[Draft Letter.]	65
Was at Windsor on S. George's Day [23 April], and tarried there all day. Wednesday he came to London. The blame of the breaking off the last great entreaty at home thrown on the City, because they would not agree to give up the power to arrest canons and servants in the churchyard. They came before the Chancellor and two Justices at Lambeth, "after mete." Hengston not being there it was adjourned to the Exchequer Chamber till the morrow.
XXVI.—Shillingford to his Fellows. (?) 24 May, 1448.
[Draft Letter.]	67
He left Exeter on Wednesday next after Corpus Christi, and reached London on the Saturday following. He describes his interviews with the Chancellor and the two Chief Justices.

	PAGE
XXVII.—Petition of the Mayor and Citizens of Exeter to the Lord Chancellor and the two Chief Justices	69
The evidence being ready, they pray for a day for the cause to be heard before the Lords, according to the King's commandment. The matter "hath honged yn debate by tyme of iiij yere, of which tyme almost two yere yn yntrete." This petition appears to have been appended to a brief of the evidence produced before the Chancellor and the Justices. No. XXIX. is evidently taken from it.
XXVIII.—A Memorandum of an Address to Sir Richard Newton at the Assizes, desiring him to decide the matter, with the assistance of Sir Philip Courtenay and Sir William Bonevill. (?) August, 1448	70
XXIX.—Petition of the Mayor and Citizens to the Earl of Devonshire, Sir Philip Courtenay, and Sir William Bonevill, praying them to make an end of the matter, which had been "yn debate by tyme of iiij yere, of the whiche tyme almost ij yere yn entrey"	71
