

The relative importance of bile salts and phospholipids in fat absorption in the sheep. By W. M. F. LEAT and F. A. HARRISON	70A
Energy status and body-weight in underfed dairy cows. By C. J. ROBERTS, SALLY M. DEW, G. D. BAIRD and I. M. REID	71A
Rumen ciliates of sheep given cellulose, lactose, sucrose or starch diets. By J. P. JOUANY, J. SENAUD, J. GRAIN P. DE PUYTORAC and P. THIVEND	72A
Digestion of lactose in the rumen of sheep. By P. THIVEND and M. A. EHOUSOU	73A
The effect of glucose infusion on liver metabolism in the dairy cow in vivo. By M. A. LOMAX, G. D. BAIRD, H. W. SYMONDS and C. B. MALLINSON	74A
Feed protein degradation and microbial protein synthesis in the rumen of sheep fed lucerne and barley. By J. C. MATHERS and E. L. MILLER	75A
The digestibility of rumen microbial protein in the small intestines of sheep. By M. V. TAS, R. F. E. AXFORD and R. A. EVANS	76A
Urea-nitrogen recycling in sheep given low quality hill herbage. By J. C. MACRAE, S. WILSON, J. A. MILNE and ANGELA M. SPENCE	77A
Estimation of extent of protein degradation from basal feeds in the rumen of sheep. By E. R. ØRSKOV and A. Z. MEHREZ	78A
Amino acid composition of beef carcass meat and amino acid requirements of growing cattle. By T. W. GRIFFITHS	79A
Metabolism of alanine in sheep muscle. By D. B. LINDSAY, J. W. STEEL and P. J. BARKER	80A
Eventual plateaux of body-weights of sheep and cattle predicted by simulation models not incorporating set points for body fat content. By J. M. FORBES	81A
Fluorine retention in growing sheep: a comparison between two phosphorus supplements as sources of fluorine. By R. G. HEMINGWAY	82A
The effect of phenothiazine on the toxicity of bracken to sheep. By A. Z. IDRUS, H. F. WALKER, D. C. MACDONALD and J. H. TOPPS	83A
Seasonal variations in the nutritive value of the mussel protein ( Mytilus edulis ). By G. VARELA, M. JOYANES and A. TORRALBA	84A
Seasonal changes in plasma retinol-binding holoprotein concentration of Japanese quail. By J. GLOVER and SUZANNE LARGE	85A
Diet-induced hyperuricaemia and platelet aggregation in rats. By P. D. WINOCOUR, K. A. MUNDAY, T. G. TAYLOR and M. R. TURNER	86A
Calcium appetite in growing pigs. By D. W. PICKARD, W. G. HEDLEY and SUSAN SKILBECK	87A

SYMPOSIUM PROCEEDINGS

*Three Hundred and Second Scientific Meeting
(One Hundred and Twenty-first Scottish Meeting)
Scottish Plant Breeding Station, Pentlandsfield, Roslin
18 MARCH 1977*

CEREALS TODAY AND TOMORROW

Chairman: DR R. C. F. MACER, Scottish Plant Breeding Station, Pentlandsfield, Roslin, Midlothian

	PAGE
Cereals, the world food problem and UK self-sufficiency. By T. L. V. ULBRICHT	121
Cereal breeding and its future trends. By R. N. H. WHITEHOUSE	127
Cereals as protein sources. By A. A. WOODHAM	137
Cereal lipids. By W. R. MORRISON	143
High-cereal diets for man. By K. J. CARPENTER	149
Present and future use of cereals as feeds for livestock. By J. F. D. GREENHALGH	159

*Three Hundred and Third Scientific Meeting
Biochemistry Department, University of Liverpool
24 MARCH 1977*

METHODS FOR EVALUATING FEEDS FOR LARGE FARM ANIMALS

Chairman: SIR KENNETH BLAXTER, Rowett Research Institute, Bucksburn, Aberdeen

Introductory remarks: the definition of feeding value. By K. L. BLAXTER	169
Problems in the statistical design and analysis of feeding trials. By J. R. MORTON and W. J. RIDGMAN	173
Determining the energy values of ingredients in pig feeds. By D. L. FRAPE and MARY G. TUCK	179
Chairman: PROFESSOR E. H. J. FORD, Department of Veterinary Clinical Studies, University of Liverpool
Digestibility at several intestinal sites in pigs. By A. G. LOW	189
Digestibility and balance in ruminants. By F. W. WAINMAN	195
Feed evaluation by measurement of sites of digestion in cannulated ruminants. By J. D. SUTTON and J. D. OLDHAM	203
Chemical analysis: sources of error. By P. J. BUTTERY and D. J. A. COLE	211
In vitro techniques for the evaluation of ruminant feeds. By D. F. OSBOURN and R. A. TERRY	219

ABSTRACTS OF COMMUNICATIONS

*Three Hundred and First Scientific Meeting
(One Hundred and Twentieth Scottish Meeting)
Queen's Hotel, Perth
4 FEBRUARY 1977*

The effect of drying temperatures upon the nutritive value of barley for growing chickens. By A. A. WOODHAM and P. H. BAILEY	50A
Attempts to overcome anti-nutritive factors in field beans ( Vicia faba L) and field peas ( Pisum sativum ) fed in diets to laying hens. By J. DAVIDSON	51A
Milk replacers based on non-milk constituents for lambs. By H. S. SOLIMAN, E. R. ØRSKOV and R. I. SMART	52A
Partition of non-urinary loss of blood urea and sulphate between the rumen and post-ruminal tract of sheep. By P. M. KENNEDY and L. P. MILLIGAN	53A
Incorporation of urea nitrogen into microbial N in the stomach of the young steer: experiments with <sup>15</sup> N. By D. N. SALTER and R. H. SMITH	54A
The effect of the level of feeding and composition of the diet on milk secretion in the Ayrshire cow. By J. S. CHALMERS, P. C. THOMAS and MORAG E. KELLY	55A
The effect of abomasal glucose or casein infusion on milk yield and milk composition in cows in early lactation and negative energy balance. By E. R. ØRSKOV and D. A. GRUBB	56A
The effect of intra-abomasal infusions of glucose or casein on milk secretion in Saanen goats receiving a low protein diet. By S. M. A. FARHAN and P. C. THOMAS	57A
The effect of processing potatoes on the apparent digestion by pigs of organic matter and nitrogen measured overall and at the terminal ileum. By R. M. LIVINGSTONE, T. ATKINSON, T. BAIRD and R. M. J. CROFTS	58A
The effect of okra mucilage ( Hibiscus esculentus L.) on the plasma cholesterol level in rats. By JENNIFER A. WOOLFE	59A
Carbohydrate tolerance in man after six weeks of pectin administration. By D. J. A. JENKINS, A. R. LEEDS, HELEN HOUSTON, L. HINKS, K. G. M. M. ALBERTI and J. H. CUMMINGS	60A
Nutritional quality of food purchased by Asian families participating in the National Food Survey. By R. W. WENLOCK and D. H. BUSS	61A
Energy intakes per meal of Ghanaian pre-school children eating traditional foods. By ERICA F. WHEELER and JENNIFER A. WOOLFE	62A
The utilization of ribonucleic acid as a source of amino-nitrogen in the rat. By D. G. PEERS	63A
Influence of riboflavin status on the red blood cell fragility in rats. By F. M. HASSAN and D. I. THURNHAM	64A

*Three Hundred and Fourth Scientific Meeting
Biochemistry Department, University of Liverpool
25 MARCH 1977*

The energy value to sheep of three mixed grass silages. By J. S. SMITH, F. W. WAINMAN and P. J. S. DEWEY	66A
Evaluation of dried coffee residue as a component of diets for ruminants. By M. M. ALI, J. H. TOPPS and the late T. B. MILLER	67A
Disruption of feeding behaviour in sheep by portal vein infusions of mixed volatile fatty acids or propionate. By M. H. ANIL and J. M. FORBES	68A
Dietary lipid supplementation and the flow of fatty acids to the duodenum of sheep. By R. KNIGHT, J. D. SUTTON and J. E. STORRY	69A
