Epistolary Fiction
in Europe
1500–1850

Epistolary Fiction in Europe, 1500–1850

Thomas O. Beebee

Thomas O. Beebee offers a history of epistolary fiction as a major phenomenon practiced across Europe from the Renaissance to the mid-nineteenth century. He shows how epistolary fiction appropriated the status and power the letter had already acquired, and goes on to explore a number of related discourses and themes, including the letter writing manual, self-referential aspects of the letter, news and travel reporting, the relationship between letters and gender, and historically-specific letter writing by eighteenth- and nineteenth-century authors including Austen, Balzac, and Dostoevsky. There is a bibliography of major European epistolary fiction to 1850.

The Royal Image: Representations of Charles I

Thomas N. Corns, Editor

1999 marks the 350th anniversary of the execution of Charles I, and this volume deals with the crisis the execution provoked in the representation of the monarchy. It looks at both sympathetic and hostile representations of Charles I, and addresses not only the period of mid-century crisis but also the earlier years of his reign and the afterlife of his royal image. It will appeal not only to literary scholars but also to historians, art historians and musicologists.

Catholicism, Controversy and the English Literary Imagination, 1558–1660

Alison Shell

The Catholic contribution to English literary culture has been widely neglected or misunderstood. This book sets out to rehabilitate a wide range of Catholic imaginative writing, while exposing the role of anti-Catholicism as an imaginative stimulus to mainstream writers in Tudor and Stuart England. It discusses canonical figures such as Sidney, Spenser, Webster and Middleton alongside many lesser-known writers. Alison Shell explores the Catholic rhetoric of loyalism and apostasy, and the stimulus given to the Catholic literary imagination by the persecution and exile so many of these writers suffered.

FROM CAMBRIDGE

Shakespeare and Social Dialogue

Dramatic Language and Elizabethan Letters

Lynne Magnusson

Shakespeare and Social Dialogue develops a systematic analysis of the rhetoric of social exchange in early modern England. Magnusson brings together writings, particularly letters, from the Elizabethan period that are normally read as historical documents and compares them with Shakespeare's play texts and sonnets. Using techniques from discourse analysis and linguistic pragmatics, especially "politeness theory," she argues that Shakespeare's language is rooted in the everyday language of Elizabethan culture. The author's readings bridge the gap between new historicism and linguistic criticism.

English Court Theatre, 1558–1642

John H. Astington

Several famous playwrights of the Elizabethan and Stuart periods, including Shakespeare, wrote for open-air public theaters and also for the private, indoor theaters at the palaces at which the Court resided. The author draws as full a picture as he can of the royal theaters used at courts, the physical and aesthetic conditions under which actors worked in them, and the composition and conduct of court audiences. The book includes an appendix that lists all known court performances of plays and masques between 1558 and 1642.

The Aesthetics of Italian Renaissance Art

A Reconsideration of Style

Hellmut Wohl

In this incisive study, Hellmut Wohl redefines style in the Italian Renaissance in light of contemporary testimony and close rereadings of seminal works. Through analysis of visual and textual evidence, he posits that Renaissance artists and their viewers conceived of art as decoration of surfaces. Offering a new approach to the issue of style, Wohl suggests that the scientific dimensions of early modern art works were less important to contemporaries than their function as ornamentation.

Giordano Bruno and Renaissance Science

HILARY GATTI

Hilary Gatti reevaluates Giordano Bruno's contribution to the scientific revolution. She challenges the argument that early modern science was impregnated with and shaped by Hermetic and occult traditions, which has led scholars to view Bruno primarily as a magus. "[I]nsightful."

Small Entrepreneurs in the Late Medieval Economy

RICHARD K. MARSHALL

"The picture Marshall gives us of these Pratese shopkeepers and artisans is altogether different from the guild stereotype that dominates much of the traditional historiography . . . Marshall's book opens up yet another direction in taking a look at how the entrepreneurs among the working class confronted market forces in organizing their work. # Renaissance Transactions

Ariosto and Tasso

VALERIA FINUCCI, EDITOR

The controversy generated in Italy by the writings of Ludovico Ariosto and Torquato Tasso during the sixteenth century was the first historically important debate on what constitutes modern literature. Applying current critical theories and tools, the essays in Renaissance Transactions reexamine these two provocative poet-thinkers, the debate they inspired, and the reasons why that debate remains relevant today.

“Most of the leading and well-known scholars of the Italian Renaissance are represented here with their sundry and complementary viewpoints. . . . The presence of so many different critical voices conveys a sense of this volume as a summa of current Renaissance criticism.”

Painting the Heavens

Art and Science in the Age of Galileo
Eileen Reeves

“Reeves’s extensive and detailed research reveals how much scientific matters were intertwined with religious beliefs. . . . This is a fascinating and important book. . . .”—*Choice

The remarkable astronomical discoveries made by Galileo with the new telescope in 1609–10 led to his famous disputes with philosophers and religious authorities, most of whom found their doctrines threatened by his evidence for Copernicus’s heliocentric universe. In this book, Eileen Reeves explores the impact of Galileo’s heavenly observations on painters of the early seventeenth century.

“Reeves’s elegantly written and exhaustively documented book reveals just how profoundly the great astronomer [Galileo] was involved in the artistic milieu of his native Florence. . . . Reeves offers much rich new detail.”

Renaissance Studies is a multidisciplinary journal which publishes articles and editions of documents on all aspects of Renaissance culture. The articles range over history, the history of art, architecture, religion, literature, and languages of Europe, during the period. Editions of important texts and documents appear in their original languages, with introductions, textual apparatus, notes and (occasionally) translations into English. The journal also contains a substantial book reviews section, and authoritative illustrated reviews of major exhibitions, and a books received listing.

Style Sheet

ARTICLES

1. RULES FOR MANUSCRIPT SUBMISSION

Three hard copies of the manuscript are required; please do not send a computer diskette at this point. The author's name, address, phone and fax numbers, and e-mail address should be included on a separate sheet, but the author's name should not appear on the title page or on other pages of the manuscript; this anonymity allows us to obtain "blind readings" from our referees.

Manuscripts should be typed or printed on letter quality printers. Manuscripts should be double-spaced including inset quotations, end-notes, and bibliography. A bibliography of printed sources is required. Photocopies of illustrations are acceptable at this stage.

2. RULES FOR ACCEPTED MANUSCRIPTS

Authors of accepted manuscripts should not send revised manuscripts until they hear from the RSA office regarding format and style. Once authors have prepared final, revised versions of the manuscripts, they should send one hard copy and one IBM compatible high-density 1.44mb diskette using Word Perfect 6.0 or higher or MS Word for Windows 6.0, 7.0 or 97. Any author who does not work in one of these programs should contact the RSA office for further instruction. Do not convert from your native word processing program to another format using a "save as" feature without first contacting the office. Please be advised that the disk copy of the manuscript will be the definitive version used by the office for editing purposes.

3. STYLE RULES

Renaissance Quarterly follows the Chicago Manual of Style, 14th ed. with a few exceptions as noted below. Accepted manuscripts that do not follow these rules will be delayed in publication. Avoid jargon. Spelling should be American in style. Titles of well-known works should appear in English in the text even if the author has listed the original in the bibliography.

The author's name should appear on a separate line after the title, and the author's institutional affiliation should appear at the end of the body of the text. Manuscripts should be double-spaced, including inset quotations, endnotes, and bibliography. Authors are required to use endnotes, and the endnotes should be inserted using a word processor endnote function. Illustrations should be unmounted glossy prints, and copies of the permissions to publish the illustrations should be sent to the office along with the manuscript.

Gender-specific language should be avoided in generic statements: "Renaissance people" (not "Renaissance men"); "humanity" (not "mankind"); "ingenious authors will find elegant solutions to their problems" (not "an ingenious author will find elegant solutions to her problem"); and so on.

NUMBERS AND DATES

The numbers one through twenty are spelled out in the text except in dates, page numbers, and when used to refer to parts of books: "one chapter deals with" vs. "chapter 1 deals with." Dates should be written European style: "1 January 1400." Page numbers of more than two digits are written thus: 66-67; 100-09; 115-508. Numbers that identify centuries are spelled out. When used as an adjective, the century name should be hyphenated: "sixteenth-century art." The Italian centuries are capitalized: "Quattrocento," "Cinquecento," etc.; English centuries names are not.

USE OF ITALICS

Italics are not used for place names (S. Maria Gloriosa dei Frari), proper names (François I), or quotations in foreign languages that are longer than two words. Thus: mamma mia vs. "mamma mia carissima."

QUOTATIONS

Citations for quotations may be handled as either endnotes or as in-text parenthetical citations. Ellipsis is rarely necessary at the beginning or the end of a quotation (which is obviously a part of a whole) but is obligatory within the body of quoted material to indicate omission. Ellipsis (. . .) is indicated by three spaced periods, or by four spaced periods when it comes at the end of a sentence within the body of the quotation.

EXAMPLES OF QUOTATIONS

1. Quotations of more than ten lines are set off in a block from the body of the text and should be double-spaced:

This is a long quotation; longer than can be comfortably accommodated within quotation marks. When the quoted material gets to be about this long or longer, set it off from your text as a block indent. (Krueger, 18)

(If using parenthetical citation as above, please note that the quotation ends with a period followed by the reference; there is no period after the parentheses.)

2. Short quotations should be handled as follows. Scholars agree that “short quotes can be accommodated within quotation marks within your text” (Krueger, 100).

(Please note that in this case the period goes after the parenthetical citation.)

3. For short quotations of poetry, use slashes (/) between lines and double slashes (//) between stanzas: “To be or not to be/ That is the question.”

QUOTATIONS IN FOREIGN LANGUAGES

All words and short passages in foreign languages should be translated in parentheses immediately after the original language the first time they are used, e.g., coram papam (“in the presence of the pope”). Long passages should be translated in the text and quoted in the notes. Very long passages will be converted to appendices. In the notes, quotations in non-Roman alphabets should not be transliterated. For Latin, abbreviations and contractions should be spelled out and modern conventions followed for such letters as I/j, u/v, w/vv, etc. Use modern punctuation and capitalize proper names even when lower-cased in the original.

ENDNOTES

Do not use footnotes in articles. Instead, use endnotes and number them using the endnote function of your word processor. All works cited are to be given in the bibliography. Do not give bibliographic references in endnotes. An asterisk should follow the title for acknowledgments; numbered endnotes should start in the text.

FORMS OF CITATION

Endnote references consist of the author’s last name, a comma, and the page number(s) without “p.” or “pp.” If citing line numbers, spell out “line.” Abbreviate “chap.” for “chapter”; “bk.” for “book”; “pt.” for “part”; and “vol.” for “volume”; “n.” (or “nn.”) for “note” (or “notes”); all are always lower-cased. “Verso” and “recto” must be specified, abbreviated in the following form in lowercase: fol. 18v; fol. 18r-v; fols. 18r-19v. “Idem.,” “op. cit.,” and “loc. cit.” are not used in Renaissance Quarterly. “Ibid.,” non-italicized, may be used to refer to data in the note immediately preceding. Authors may cite page numbers in the text, but they must indicate their intention to do so in the first endnote citation.

EXAMPLES OF CITATIONS

1. King, 98-144.

(Standard citation; only one author and one work.)

2. Ibid., 79.

(Because the same publication was cited in the immediately preceding note, the reference is indicated by the abbreviation "ibid.," with a period but not italicized.)

3. R. L. Stevenson, 81.

(Because the bibliography includes another author of this surname, the initials are included.)

4. Kristeller, 2:73.

(A reference to a multi-volume work.)

5. Kristeller, 1929, 37.

(Because there is more than one source by this author, the year is added.)

6. Monfasani, 1980a, 51.

(Because there is more than one publication by this author in 1980, a lowercase "a" [or "b," "c," etc.] is added after the year.)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

The bibliography included at the end of your article should follow the Chicago Manual of Style. Works should be listed alphabetically by author. If the author is unknown, list by title. Do not list primary and secondary sources separately. The second citation by an author should have a line five spaces long followed by a period. Where there is more than one author, only the first should be listed with last name first. Abbreviate "ed(s)." for "editor(s)" and "trans." for "translator(s)." Where more than one US city has the same name, specify the state using US postal style: Durham, NC and Durham, NH. Where an American city is named after a European city, list the state for the American city if necessary for clarity: Cambridge for Cambridge University Press, but Cambridge, MA for Harvard University Press. Foreign place names are given in English: Venice, not Venezia. List no more than two cities where the book was published.

EXAMPLES OF BIBLIOGRAPHICAL FORMAT

1. Basic bibliographic form:

Brucker, Gene. Giovanni and Lusanna: Love and Marriage in Renaissance Florence. Berkeley and Los Angeles, 1986.

McMillian, Scott and Sally-Beth Maclean. The Queen's Men and their Plays. Cambridge and New York, 1998.

2. Books with editors:

Rabil, Albert, Jr., ed. Renaissance Humanism: Foundations, Forms and Legacy. 3 vols. Philadelphia, 1988.

(Note the placement of "ed." and that the editor's name precedes the title.)

Lyons, Bridget Gellert. "Poetic Affinities: Metaphysical and Modern Poets." In Teaching Metaphysical Poetry, ed. Sidney Gottlieb, 78-87. New York, 1989.

(Note that in a selection from an edited book, the editor's name follows the title of the book and the page numbers of the article follow the editor's name.)

Caspar, Max. Kepler. Ed. and trans. C. Doris Hellman. London, 1969. Reprint, New York, 1993.

(Note that if there is an editor and a translator, list both. Also, note the placement of "Reprint" and that it is not abbreviated.)

3. A multi-volume book:

Kristeller, Paul Oskar. Renaissance Thought. 2 vols. New York, 1961-1965.

4. Articles in journals:

Steinberg, Leo. "Leonardo's Last Supper." Art Quarterly 36 (1973): 297-410.

(If the journal had differently numbered series, this would be indicated as follows: Journal, 2d ser., 80 (1978): 30-38; or Journal, n.s. 11 (1980): 489-504.)

5. Book reviews:

Prescott, Anne Lake. Rev. of Vulgar Rabelais by Carol Clark and Rabelais in Glasgow, ed. James A. Coleman and Christine M. Schollen-Jimack. Renaissance Quarterly 39 (1986): 552-55.

REVIEWS AND REVIEW ESSAYS

Renaissance Quarterly does not accept unsolicited or volunteer reviews. If you wish to be considered as a reviewer, please see RNN 98.2 (Fall/Winter) for details.

Reviewers may wish to comment on the care and accuracy with which the book under review has been produced. However, please refrain from recording typographical errors and spelling mistakes unless substantive points can be made. Please observe the due date and word length for your review. If a review exceeds the assigned word limit, it will be returned for editing.

STYLE RULES FOR REVIEWS

Reviewers should send one hard copy and one IBM compatible high-density 1.44mb diskette using Word Perfect 6.0 or higher or MS Word for Window 6.0, 7.0 or 97. Any author who does not work in one of these programs should contact the RSA office for further instruction. Reviews may also be sent to the office as e-mail attachments. If you wish to do so, please contact the office. Be advised that the disk copy or e-mail attachment of the manuscript will be the definitive version used by the office for editing purposes. Reviews should be typed double spaced. If possible, please use italics rather than underlining. Type the bibliographical information at the top of the review, double spaced, as follows:

Shakespeare, William. The Merry Wives of Windsor. Ed. David Crane. (The New Cambridge Shakespeare.) Cambridge and New York: Cambridge University Press, 1997. xi + 2 pls. + 163 pp. $39.95 (cl), $10.95 (pbk). ISBN: 0-521-22155-2 (cl), 0-521-29370-7 (pbk).

Quotations within the text from the book under review should be followed by a page number in parentheses: "The history of the text" (132). Reference to other works should be made by parenthetical citations: "The history of the text" (Thomas Writer, The Book Cited [1997]). Renaissance Quarterly does not print footnotes to reviews.

At the end of your review, please type your name and institution as follows:

Joan Doe
University of Virginia

STYLE RULES FOR REVIEW ESSAYS

A review essay should be titled as if it were an article. The title should then be followed by the bibliographical information for the books under review. Quotations should be cited using in-text parenthetical citation style. Although it is not encouraged, if endnotes are necessary, please follow the guidelines under "Articles" for preparation of the endnotes and the bibliography.

Call for Papers

CHICAGO 2001:

*THE ANNUAL MEETING
OF THE
RENAISSANCE SOCIETY OF AMERICA*

THURSDAY THROUGH SATURDAY,
29 TO 31 MARCH 2001

The program committee invites abstracts for papers as well as for panels. For each proposal, please send eight (8) hard copies to the RSA office, Attn: Chicago 2001 Program Committee. Single copies of abstracts may be sent to the office as email attachments (rsa@is.nyu.edu) or faxes (212-995-4205) in order to meet the deadline. However, if we do not receive the eight hard copies within one week of the deadline, we will not consider your submission. Once the committee has made its decision, you will be contacted and asked to send a final, electronic version to the office. Please do not send disks with your initial submission.
