Paradigms of Poverty: A Rehabilitation of B. S. Rowntree.
J. H. VEIT-WILSON

p. 96, lines 14–21

The widespread misrepresentation of Rowntree as the effective originator of the minimum subsistence levels embodied in the income scales of the Beveridge Report, National Assistance and Supplementary Benefit is particularly ironic in the light of the calculations by Atkinson and his colleagues which show that the poverty line used by Rowntree in his 1950 survey of York was higher than the prevailing National Assistance scale rates by a factor of between 30 and 40 per cent (Atkinson et al., 1981, p. 67).

Couples, Conflict, and Change

Social work with marital relationships

and KATE WILSON

Few couples, whether married or not, have trouble-free relationships and yet many social workers when faced with the marital problems of their clients are reluctant to intervene. Marital (as opposed to family) work until recently has received little emphasis in social work. This practice guide and source book draws together current thinking about marriage and marital problems

Permanency Planning for Children

Concepts and methods

ANTHONY MALUCCIO,
KATHLEEN OLMSTEAD,
and EDITH FEIN

Too many children throughout the world live in a state of limbo, in disruptive families or in actual out-of-home care. The plight of these children has led in recent years to the emergence of permanency planning as a popular movement in the delivery of services to children. This book presents a permanency planning framework for child welfare practice.

Inventing Retirement

The Development of Occupational Pensions
in Britain

LESLIE HANNAH

Pension funds now account for a large portion of old age incomes, of capital ownership, and of employee fringe benefits. A hundred years ago they hardly existed. This book examines the interplay of business, political and social forces in this profound transformation, showing why old age saving became rooted in the employment contract. The analysis is based on historical materials on pension funds, most of which have never previously been analysed, but this new interpretation is skilfully interwoven with the more familiar story of the development of state welfare and of personnel management.

'This is a much-needed survey of an important strand in British social provision . . . Occupational pensions . . . are interesting and important . . . If you want to understand why, read this book.'

Journal of Social Policy

Notes for Contributors

1. All contributions and correspondence should be sent to: The Editor, Journal of Social Policy, Department of Social Policy and Administration, University of Leeds, Leeds LS2 9JT. All books for review should be sent to: The Review Editor, Journal of Social Policy, Department of Physics, University of Bristol, Bristol BS8 1TH.
2. Articles should generally contain between 5,000 and 10,000 words including footnotes, although longer or shorter articles may be accepted by arrangement with the editor. Short articles stand a better chance of early publication.
3. Submission of an article is taken to imply that it has not previously been published, or is not being considered for publication elsewhere. If an author is publishing a related article elsewhere, this fact should be stated.
4. Contributions (articles, review articles, reviews) should be clearly typed on one side of the paper only using a conventional size of paper, preferably A4. All material should be typed double-spaced with generous margins. Contributors should send two copies and keep one copy of the typescript for correcting proofs.
5. Contributions should be accompanied by an abstract of between one and two hundred words, and a title page providing information about the position/s held by the author/s and giving full details of any acknowledgements.
6. Manuscripts will not be accepted for publication unless they conform to the usual journal style. Contributors are advised to look at the latest issue of the journal for general guidance, although a brief style sheet is available from the editor upon request. Particular attention should be made to the journal requirements about references and tables.
7. Notes should not contain bibliographical references: these should be built into the text and the Harvard (author/date) system used. Such notes as are essential should be referred to in numerical order throughout the text and the numbers shown as superscript. Notes and bibliographical references should be typed (double-spaced) as separate sections at the end of the article.
8. Tables should be clearly laid out and designed to fit on to a page 234 mm × 155 mm. Vertical lines between columns should be omitted, and horizontal lines limited to the top and bottom of the table, with an additional one below the column headings. Totals and percentages should be labelled, and units identified.
9. First proofs may be read and corrected by contributors provided that they can give the editor an address through which they can be reached without delay and can guarantee to return the corrected proofs to the editor, by airmail where appropriate, within seven days of receiving them.
10. Authors of articles and review articles (but not book reviews) receive twenty-five free offprints. Additional copies may be bought if ordered at proof stage.
11. Contributors of accepted articles will be asked to assign their copyright, on certain conditions, to Cambridge University Press, to help protect their material, particularly in the USA.
