BASIC RUSSIAN

By R. A. DOMAR, formerly at Columbia University. 516 pages, $6.95.

Book utilizes a new, authoritative approach based on recent Soviet publications. Introduces students to a basic vocabulary of about 1500 words and to grammar of the Russian language. Approach is basically grammatical and is characterized by the use of narrative sections to introduce the student to the spoken language. A WORK BOOK FOR BASIC RUSSIAN is also available and contains vocabulary exercises, verbs to be conjugated, many of the written exercises from the textbook, short translation exercises, and speech pattern drills. Language tape recordings for the first 14 lessons will be available in the autumn.

REVOLUTION IN HUNGARY

By Paul E. Zinner

The drama of the Hungarian Revolution is revealed here in all its dimensions. Professor Zinner authentically recounts the incidents that triggered the violence; the intellectual struggles for power within the Communist Party and the indecisiveness of the first Soviet intervention; the collapse of the Communist power structure and the reappearance of political parties; the social, political, and economic aims of the revolt; its brief triumph, suppression, and international aspects. This book is based upon extensive interviews with refugees, close study of documentary sources, and profound reflection on the nature of the Communist totalitarian dictatorship and the conditions of its downfall.

SOVIET POLITICS AND THE UKRAINE, 1917-1957

By Robert S. Sullivant

Mr. Sullivant traces the evolution of post-revolutionary Soviet policy in an exhaustive, three-fold examination of Soviet politics, Soviet response to regionalism, and Soviet reaction to Ukrainian nationalism.

Mr. Sullivant's study is a scrupulous assessment of Soviet government and Party documents and materials, the Soviet press (especially Ukrainian newspapers and journals), Soviet monographs and memoirs, and emigre reports.

CZECHOSLOVAK NATIONAL INCOME AND PRODUCT, 1947-1948 and 1955-1956

By Thad Paul Alton and Associates

By their intensive research and statistical ingenuity, Dr. Alton and his associates have answered the challenge posed by the shortcomings of the official statistics of the economies of countries behind the Iron Curtain. Using a fully articulated national accounting system, they show in the current market prices the transactions among the sectors of business enterprises, households, government, and the foreign sector. Derived from these accounts are the familiar national product aggregates. Distorting elements in the market prices are identified, and the GNP is adjusted both by sectors of origin and final uses, showing the economic structure in terms of resource costs.

DISSENSIONS IN INTERNATIONAL COMMUNISM

Edited by Alexander Dallin

First in a series of collected documents pertaining to discord among the Communist parties of various countries, this book enumerates the debates and rifts that emerged in the Communist movement during and following the Twenty-Second Congress of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union. The issues—Sino-Soviet relations, Albania's break with Moscow, de-Stalinization, opposition groups, and "peaceful coexistence"—have reverberated among Communist parties throughout the world. An introduction by Mr. Dallin and Zbigniew Brzezinski discusses the nature of the disputes.
