This book began its life as a doctoral thesis written at the Heidelberg University, Germany. It was submitted to Heidelberg University as a doctoral dissertation with the title 'Acts of Aid: The Politics of Relief and Reconstruction after the 1934 Bihar–Nepal Earthquake'. I am grateful for the numerous helpful and knowledgeable people who have shown their support and helped me at various stages. At the very outset, I want to thank my supervisors for their unstinting support throughout the process of research and writing. Gita Dharampal offered a warm welcome at the Department of History at the South Asia Institute. Gerrit Jasper Schenk must take special credit for inspiring my interest in historical natural disasters by inviting me into the research group 'Cultures of Disaster' at the Cluster of Excellence 'Asia and Europe in a Global Context'. I am indebted to both for unwavering intellectual support.

I am grateful for the support of colleagues at the Department of History at the South Asia Institute and at the Cluster of Excellence, 'Asia and Europe in Global Context', who gave their valuable advice and discussed ideas in workshops and colloquia. Milinda Banerjee, Somnath Batabyal, Bindu Bhadana, Amelia Bonea, Felix Eickelbeck, Ivana Gubic, Rafael Klöber, Prabhat Kumar, Manju Ludwig, Sarah Luedecke, Soumen Mukherjee, Sridevi Padmanabhan, Swarali Paranjape, Dominik Schieder, Sayed Wiqar Ali Shah and Katharina Weiler shared their research and contributed towards the completion of my project with encouragement and kind advice. I am thankful to Kristine Chalyan-Daffner, Noura Dirani and Benedict Mette for their valuable company and collaboration in researching historical disasters and images of disasters. At other institutions, I have had the pleasure to receive advice and help from many people including Shaila Bhatti, Aryendra Chakravartty, Maria Framke, Mette Gabler, Yogesh Raj and Nitin Sinha. I am thankful for advice from audiences and participants in colloquia, conferences and workshops, most notably at the Department of History, Technische Universität Darmstadt, the Department of History, York (U.K.), South Asian Studies for Young Scholars Meet by SASNET (Falsterbo, Sweden), by the Association of South Asian Environmental Historians, the Department of History, Assam University (Silchar), and in the Fifth European PhD Workshop in South Asian Studies (Paris). I am thankful for comments by audience and participants in the conference 'Epicentre to Aftermath: Political, Social and Cultural Impacts of Earthquakes in South Asia' at SOAS University of London, where I had the opportunity to develop some thoughts around metaphors and gender, at the invitation of Michael Hutt, Stefanie Lotter, Michele Serafini and Edward Simpson. Discussions with John Whelpton and participants at the conference enriched my perspective about earthquake aftermaths in Nepal. At Leiden University I had the pleasure to discuss the politics of historical disasters at the conference 'Relocating Governance in Asia: State and Society in South- and Southeast Asia, c. 1800–2000', thanks to Girija Joshi, Maarten Manse and Sander Tetteroo. I am also grateful to Cécile Stephanie Stehrenberger for generously sharing a range of literature on body politics and disaster research. The conferences 'The Transculturality of Historical Disasters: Governance and the Materialisation of Glocalisation' and 'Imaging Disaster' organised by the research groups Cultures of Disasters and Images of Disasters, respectively, at the Excellence Initiative Asia and Europe at Heidelberg University were helpful for developing initial ideas.

I wish to sincerely thank the staff at Heidelberg University, the Heidelberg University Library, the Library of the South Asia Institute and the Max Planck Institute for Comparative Public Law and International Law in Heidelberg, Leibniz-Zentrum Moderner Orient (ZMO), Berlin, the British Library and the Library at the School of Oriental and African Studies (SOAS) University College of London for their kind service and helpful advice. In Switzerland, thanks to the kind guidance and extra effort by staff and archivists at Bibliothèque Cantonale et Universitaire Lausanne (Lausanne Cantonal and University Library) and Bibliothèque de la Ville (The Town Library) in La Chaux-de-Fonds, and Heinz Gabathuler, SCI International Archives Coordinator, I had the great opportunity to view the private papers of Pierre Cérésole and Service Civil International. In India, I am thankful to the staff at the National Archives of India, the Nehru Memorial Museum and Library (NMML), the Library of the Indian Red Cross Society (New Delhi), the West Bengal State Archives and the Indian National Library, especially the archival and newspaper sections. In Bihar, I want to thank the staff at the Bihar State Archives, the A. N. Sinha Library and the K. P. Jayaswal Research Institute (Patna) for their support and kind guidance during long research stints. I want to thank, in particular, the director and staff of the Bihar State Archives for their readiness to provide me with service and helpful advice. I am thankful to the director and staff of Khuda Bakhsh Oriental Public Library for assistance and providing accommodation during my stays in Patna. I want to thank the Asian Development Research Institute (ADRI, Patna) and Kathinka Sinha Kerkhoff for taking interest in my research. I had the pleasure to meet Surendra Gopal, who generously shared his knowledge and guided me to sources in Patna. I am grateful to the late Hetukar Jha and to Tejkar Jha for inviting me to the Darbhanga Raj Archives. The staff of the Maharajadhiraja Kameshwar Singh Kalyani Foundation provided all the support I could wish for at Darbhanga.

My research was generously supported by the German Research Council (Deutsche Forschungsgemeinschaft) at the Cluster of Excellence. The Cluster of Excellence also granted a scholarship for an internship at the League of Nations Archives at the United Nations Office at Geneva, where mentors and staff at UNOG, in particular Blandine Blukacz-Louisfert, Colin Wells and Jacques Oberson, generously shared their expertise about the archives. In the period leading up to the completion of this book, I benefitted from the infrastructural and financial support of NIAS SUPRA writing fellowship at Nordic Institute of Asian Studies (NIAS, Copenhagen) and from being Junior Fellow at Nalanda University (New Delhi/Rajgir) where I had the pleasure to interact with Michiel Baas, M. B. Rajani, Gopa Sabharwal, Jyoti Sapru Dar, Amartya Sen, Anjana Sharma and Aviram Sharma. An MWK-COFUND research fellowship (Marie Skłodowska-Curie grant agreement no. 665958) at the Max Weber Center for Advanced Cultural and Social Studies at the University of Erfurt was deeply enriching. As a researcher, I am glad to currently be part of the supportive environment in the Department of Cultural Sciences at the Linnaeus University and the Linnaeus University Centre for Concurrences in Colonial Postcolonial Studies in Sweden. The publication is generously funded by Sven och Dagmar Saléns Stiftelse, Linnaeus University Open Access Funding, Linnaeus University Centre for Concurrences in Colonial and Postcolonial Studies, the Department of Cultural Sciences at Linnaeus University, and Heidelberg Centre for Transcultural Studies at Heidelberg University. I am grateful to the editorial team at Cambridge University Press, in particular Qudsiya Ahmed and Sohini Ghosh, for their patience and professionalism.

Finally, I want to thank the late Staffan Lindberg (Lund University), Martin Gansten (Lund University), Mirja Juntunen (Uppsala University) and Elisabeth Pachon (University of Copenhagen) for their guidance and inspired teaching that I was fortunate to receive as a student before embarking on the PhD project.

Many friends have made the task more enjoyable. My parents and my brother have given endless love and support, without which I could not have managed. My greatest love and gratitude is owed to Niladri for unwavering exhortation and inspiration when most needed. Special acknowledgement must go to Johanna and Ethan, who both arrived in the process of researching and writing this book, for their patience and constant cheers.
