

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

JAMES L. GIBSON is Professor of Political Science at the University of Houston. He is co-author of Party Organizations and American Politics and Civil Liberties and Nazis: The Skokie Free-Speech Controversy. He is currently engaged in research on political tolerance and political freedom in the United States and Europe, and the construction and analysis of a data base on the Warren and Burger eras of the United States Supreme Court.

SHELDON EKLAND-OLSON is Professor of Sociology at the University of Texas at Austin. He has published articles on the relationship between prison overcrowding and violence, and racial discrimination and the death penalty in Texas. He is currently investigating the systemic impact of litigated reform. He recently coauthored a book with Steve J. Martin entitled Texas Prisons: The Walls Came Tumbling Down.

RICHARD LEMPERT is a Professor of Law and Sociology at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor. He has served as editor of the Law & Society Review and has been a member, Vice-Chair and Chair of the National Research Council's Committee on Research on Law Enforcement and the Administration of Justice. He is the author, with Joseph Sanders, of An Invitation to Law and Social Science.

INGA MARKOVITS is Professor of Law at the University of Texas at Austin. She is particularly interested in the differences between capitalist and socialist law. In a number of studies she has used the legal systems of East and West Germany as a laboratory setting for examining the impact of ideology on the structure of rights and on the uses of litigation. She is currently exploring conflicting ideological strands in American family-law thinking.

JAMES W. MARQUART is Associate Professor of Criminal Justice at Sam Houston State University. He has published articles on the impact of litigation on prison organizations and social control in prisons. He is currently studying the prison and parole behavior of commuted capital offenders and the history of the death penalty in Texas. He recently coauthored a book with Ben M. Crouch: An Appeal to Justice: Litigated Reform of Texas Prisons.

JONATHAN R. SORENSON is a doctoral student in the College of Criminal Justice at Sam Houston State University. His research interests include the legal liabilities of drug testing, the prison and parole behavior of commuted capital offenders, and the history of the death penalty in Texas.

JUNE STARR is Associate Professor of Anthropology at State University of New York at Stony Brook and a Trustee of the Law and Society Association. She has recently co-authored a book, History and Power in the Study of Law: New Directions in Legal Anthropology, with Jane F. Collier. She is finishing a manuscript that suggests that the growth of Turkish law and legal structures comes not as the logical evolution of ideas, but as the embodiment of struggles between groups that were worked out in compromises within the legal system.
