

Farm Tenancy and the Census in Antebellum Georgia

Frederick A. Bode and Donald E. Ginter

In this volume, Frederick Bode and Donald Ginter undertake a new interpretation of the 1860 federal census to reveal that extensive family tenancy, and probably sharecropping, were not the offspring of Emancipation and Reconstruction, but instead were widely present before the upheaval of the Civil War. $27.00

The Legal Fraternity and the Making of a New South Community, 1848–1882

Gail Williams O'Brien

Examining the impact of the Civil War on leadership patterns in the upper South, Gail O'Brien employs both quantitative and traditional historical methods to detail the transformation of the prewar planter class into a more powerful planter-businessman-attorney elite that was at once economically progressive and socially conservative. $23.50

The University of Georgia Press

Athens, Georgia 30602