Contributors

María Inés Barbero is professor of economic and business history at the Universidad de San Andrés, Argentina, and director of the Centro de Estudios de Historia y Desarrollo de Empresas (Research Center on Business History and Development). She is the author and editor of numerous books and articles on Argentinean and Latin American business and economic history and founder of the Red de Historia de Empresas (Network on Business History) and coeditor of its virtual Bulletin. She was a visiting scholar at the David Rockefeller Center for Latin American Studies at Harvard University.

Marcelo Bucheli is assistant professor in the Department of Business Administration and the Department of History at the University of Illinois (Urbana-Champaign). He received his Ph.D. from Stanford University. During the academic year 2004–05, he was the Harvard-Newcomen Fellow, and in 2004 his article “Enforcing Business Contracts in South America” was awarded the Newcomen-Harvard Award for the best article published in Business History Review in that year. Among his publications are Bananas and Business: The United Fruit Company in Colombia, 1899–2000 (2005) and several articles. He is currently conducting research on the political economy of oil multinationals in Latin America.

Carlos Dávila is professor of business history and head of the research group Historia y Empresariado in the School of Management at Universidad de los Andes, Bogotá, Colombia. He has held visiting research appointments at the University of Oxford and the London School of Economics. Among his current research interests are the origins of entrepreneurship in Colombia and the growth of Colombian conglomerates from 1970 to 2000. He edited Empresas y empresarios en la historia de Colombia: Siglos XIX (2003) and (with Rory Miller) Business History in Latin America: The Experience of Seven Countries (1999). His article “Historia empresarial en América Latina” was published in Historia empresarial: Pasado, presente y retos de futuro, edited by C. Erro (2003).

Aurora Gómez-Galbarriato is associate professor in the Economics Department of the Centro de Investigación y Docencia Económicas, A.C. in Mexico City. She received her Ph.D. in history from Harvard University. She has published several articles on the economic and business history of Mexico and Latin America. Recently, she coauthored a book on the Mexican Porfirian period and edited a book on the comparative economic history of Mexico and Spain. She is currently writing a book about the Mexican textile industry during the early twentieth century.

Norma S. Lanciotti is professor of economic history and the history of economic thought in the Department of Economics, National University of Rosario, Argentina and researcher at the National Council of Scientific and Technical Research (CONICET). She was an affiliate of the David Rockefeller Center for Latin American Studies at Harvard University in 2006. Her dissertation was awarded the Estudios Sociales' prize for best dissertation in social studies in 2006. Her book De rentistas a empresarios: Inversión inmobiliaria y urbanización en la pampa argentina—Rosario, 1880–1914 is forthcoming. Currently, she is examining foreign investment in electric utilities in Argentina from 1890 to 1958 and Argentinean real-estate companies from 1900 to 1982.

Carlos Marichal received his Ph.D. in history from Harvard University (1977). He is professor of Latin American economic history at El Colegio de Mexico, a leading research and postgraduate institute. He is the author of Bankruptcy of Empire: Mexican Silver and the Wars between Spain, Britain and France, 1763–1810 (2007) and A Century of Debt Crises in Latin America: From Independence to the Great Depression, 1920–1930 (1989). He is founder and past president (2000–04) of the Asociación Mexicana de Historia Económica.

Aldo Musacchio is assistant professor at Harvard Business School and a Faculty Research Fellow at the National Bureau of Economic Research. His research explores the role of property rights and the legal environment for long-term economic development. Recently, he published Experiments in Financial Democracy (forthcoming) and “Can Civil Law Countries Get Good Institutions? Lessons from the History of Creditor Rights and Bond Markets in Brazil,” in the Journal of Economic History (March 2008). He is currently working on a history of global stock and bond markets between 1870 and 1914 and is involved in a project that is examining the evolution of executive compensation in Brazil.
