(Untersuchungen zur antiken Literatur und Geschichte 56)

A deeper understanding of Virgil's Aeneid can only be achieved through the Iliad and Odyssey as its most important models. As the author shows, Classical views of Homer differ significantly from those prevailing today, and this allows the conception of the Aeneid to be seen in a new light. In the first part of the study, the author analyses the way in which Virgil indirectly characterises the protagonists of his epic (incl. Aeneas, Turnus, Dido) through allusions to the contemporary philosophical and ethical understanding of Homer's models. In the second part, the author examines how the "poeta doctus" creatively transforms the Hellenistic critique of Homer in the Aeneid.

The author is Post-doctoral Fellow in the Graduate School of "Commentary in Ancient and Medieval Times" of the German Research Council.

Pictorial Narrative in Greek Art

Mark Stansbury-O'Donnell

Provides a comprehensive framework for the development of pictorial narrative in ancient art. Mark Stansbury-O'Donnell identifies the multiple levels at which narration operates, from the most basic signs to the object of narration for the ancient viewer. This study also defines and standardizes a vocabulary for pictorial narrative.

The Unity of Plato's Sophist

Between the Sophist and the Philosopher

Noburu Notomi

This new interpretation of Plato's dialogue the Sophist shows how important the issues concerning the sophist are to the possibility of philosophy. Plato is seen to struggle with difficult philosophical issues in a single line of inquiry and, in defining the sophist, to reveal his conception of the authentic philosopher.
