

Announcement of Awards

Fellowships for Research in the United States of America

The American Council of Learned Societies announces an American Studies Fellowship Program for the academic year 1971-72 available to citizens of Europe. These Fellowships are for scholars of no more than 45 years of age, who are teaching at the university level and who wish to undertake advanced research in the United States on some aspect of the history, culture, or civilization of that country. Appropriate fields include American art, history, law, or literature, and the architectural history, economy, economic history, geography, government, philosophy, politics, or society of the United States. Research on techniques or general theory of any discipline is not appropriate to this program.

The Fellowships are for a minimum period of nine months, and provide for all expenses, including transportation, maintenance, and health insurance for the recipients and their accompanying dependents, as well as the recipients' educational and research expenses.

Selection of candidates will be on a competitive basis. Scholars interested in applying should write to The American Studies Program, American Council of Learned Societies, 345 East 46th Street, New York, N.Y. 10017, U.S.A., before December 1, 1970. The letter should contain the applicant's name, address, age, position, a very brief description of the research he wishes to undertake and the names and addresses of three scholars who might serve as referees of the candidate's qualifications. If the ACLS judges the candidate to be qualified to enter the competition, formal application forms will immediately be sent to the candidate for completion and return before January 1, 1971. Announcement of awards will be made in April, 1971.

Ford Grants

The Ford Foundation has announced grants recently to support programs for independent research in the social sciences for young scholars, doctoral programs reforms in the social sciences and humanities and in the area of international training research and development.

Sixteen political scientists received awards for the academic year 1970-71 to support independent research on subjects of their own choosing. The grants, made to the graduate universities with which the fellows are associated provide for full salary plus a modest research allowance for an academic year free of teaching and administrative duties. Political Science Fellows and their research topics are:

California

Nelson W. Polsby, University of California, Berkeley. Research on the politics of the U.S. House of Representatives.

Raymond E. Wolfinger, Stanford University. Research on the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

Connecticut

Gerald H. Kramer, Yale University. Research for a theoretical study of voting mechanisms.

James T. Murphy, Wesleyan University. Research on "the empty porkbarrel."

Edward T. Rowe, University of Connecticut. Research on supranationalism in the United Nations.

Hawaii

Lawrence H. Nitz, University of Hawaii. Research on the implications for theories of political decision processes of dropping the assumptions of perfectly ordered preferences, symmetrical decision functions, and unrestrictedly transferrable utility.

Louisiana

William B. Gwyn, Tulane University. Research on the institutionalization of the British Parliamentary Commissioner.

Massachusetts

Robert K. Faulkner, Boston College. Research on the place of reason in ethics.

James R. Kurth, Harvard University. Research on comparative study of political development in Latin America and Latin Europe.

Research and Training Support

Announcements of Awards

Michigan

James Eisenstein, University of Michigan. Research on an analysis of the role of the office of United States Attorney in political and legal systems.

Timothy M. Hennessey, Michigan State University. Research on "objective security" political development in France, England, and Sweden: 1850-1965.

Minnesota

David E. RePass, University of Minnesota. Research on rationality in electoral decisions.

New York

Michael Barkun, Syracuse University. Research on millenarian movements and political violence.

Gordon S. Black, University of Rochester. Research on political socialization and political recruitment: the role of incentives for the politician.

Pennsylvania

James F. Petras, Pennsylvania State University. Research on agrarian reform and public administration: the cases of Chile and Peru.

Oliver P. Williams, University of Pennsylvania. Research on comparative urban political analysis.

Under a third round of grants to ten universities, the Ford Foundation is continuing its support of a program to reform the doctoral program in the social sciences and humanities. According to the Foundation, the participating graduate departments have responded to the need to restructure courses, drop superfluous offerings, and in other ways gear their doctoral programs to a four-year span. Preliminary reports indicate that in most of the participating institutions student drop-out rates have been reduced overall, despite inroads made by the military draft. The ten participating universities and the latest grants to each are: University of California, Berkeley, $650,000; Cornell University, $539,000; University of Chicago, $739,000; Harvard University, $444,000; University of Michigan, $625,000; University of Pennsylvania, $620,000; Princeton University, $600,000; Stanford University, $425,000; University of Wisconsin, $669,000; Yale University, $665,000.

Grants aimed at increasing international understanding of the complexities of arms control have been awarded by the Foundation under its programs of international training, research, and development. Institutions and organizations receiving awards are:

California Institute of Technology for a joint seminar with the Rand Corporation on arms control and foreign policy, $285,000.

The University of Chicago for a Midwest seminar on foreign policy and arms control issues, $264,000.

The Brookings Institution for foreign policy studies, $400,000.

The American Academy of Arts and Sciences for meetings between Soviet and American scientists and academic leaders on arms control problems, $114,500.

Princeton University for preparation of a guide to clarify terminology on the principal concepts of nuclear strategy, $16,000.

Other awards in the area of international training, research and development are:

Harvard University for support of development research at the Center for International Affairs, $320,000.

American Council of Young Political Leaders in partial support of educational and information activities aimed at informing young political leaders about problems and policies of other countries and to facilitate international contacts, $25,000.

American Society of International Law to support activities that bring together academic, governmental and members of the legal profession for discussion and research on international problems, $376,500.

British Institute of International and Comparative Law for general support of the Institute, $125,000.

Columbia University for support of training and research in Russian and Soviet Studies at the Russian Institute and at the Institute on East Central Europe and support of a study in Japan's role in international politics by the School of International Affairs, $485,000.

Cornell University for support of European Studies through its Center for International Studies, $100,000.

Council on International Educational Exchange for fellowships for American students participating in the Russian language and area program at Leningrad State University, $150,000.

University of Essex in partial support of a European Inter-University Consortium for Political Research and a program of seminars, workshops, $272,000.

Hague Academy of International Law for its program of summer seminars, research and advanced training in international law, $132,000.

Institute for Defense Analyses for a pilot study on the use of technical judgment and analysis in policy-making, centering on the 1961 decision to undertake the Apollo Moon-landing project, $35,000.

Johns Hopkins University for continued support of seminars on the USSR and Eastern Europe, $38,400.

University of Pittsburgh to support a new Council for European Studies among European Research and training programs of eight American universities, $385,000.

University of California, Berkeley, for support of research at its Center for Japanese and Korean Studies, $250,000.

International Association for Cultural Freedom to increase support of its publications for Asian affiliates, $115,000.

University of Rochester in partial support of a workshop Seminar on Pakistan, $11,000.

University of Oxford to assist the program of the Latin American Centre at St. Anthony's College, $160,000.

National Endowment for the Humanities

Eight political scientists shared in the National Endowment for the Humanities grants for 1970. Established in 1965 by Congress as a part of the National Foundation on the Arts and the Humanities, the Endowment supports scholarship, writing, and educational projects in the humanities.

The following political scientists received grants:

Richard A. Chapman, University of Montana, summer stipend.

Jeanne J. Kirkpatrick, Georgetown, research grant.

Leslie B. McLemore, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Afro-American Studies Fellowship.

Inez Smith Reid, Brooklyn College, Education program in Afro-American Studies support.

James M. Rhodes, Marquette University, summer stipend.

Robert F. Sasseen, San Jose State College, research grant.

Paul E. Sigmund, Princeton University, senior fellowship.

Margery Thompson, research grant.

SSRC Grants

Foreign Area Fellowship Program

In the eighth year of administration of the Foreign Area Fellowship Program by the Social Science Research Council and American Council of Learned Societies, fellowships have been awarded for study of four major world areas, and awards have also been made for research training and internships in Latin America and the Caribbean. As of August 1, appointments listed below have been accepted for 1970-71:

Africa and the Near East

Walter Barrows, Ph.D. candidate in political science, Yale University, for preparation of a dissertation on micro-politics in Sierra Leone (renewal)

Robert Charlick, Ph.D. candidate in political science, University of California, Los Angeles, for research in Niger and the United States on agricultural change as a strategy of modernization – political and social factors in rural Hausa development (renewal)

Michael Cohen, Ph.D. candidate in political science, University of Chicago for preparation of a dissertation on the politics of urban development in Ivory Coast (renewal)

John Collins, Ph.D. candidate in comparative politics, Johns Hopkins University, School of Advanced International Studies, for completion of research and preparation of a dissertation in Niger, France, and the United States on animation rurale (renewal)

Announcements of Awards

August Nimitz, Ph.D. candidate in political science, Indiana University, for completion of research and preparation of a dissertation in Tanzania and the United States on the role of Muslim tarikas in political institutionalization in Tanzania since the beginning of the British period (renewal)

James Thomson, Ph.D. candidate in political science, Indiana University, for research in France and Niger on legal analysis of rural institutional change: ramifications of imposing cooperatives on 5 villages in Niger

South, Southeast, and East Asia Studies

John Campbell, Ph.D. candidate in government, Columbia University, for completion of research and preparation of a dissertation in Japan and the United States on the budgetary process in Japan (renewal)

Kenneth Lieberthal, Ph.D. candidate in government, Columbia University, for completion of research and preparation of a dissertation in Taiwan and the United States on the Communist takeover of Tientsin, 1949-53

Terry MacDougall, Ph.D. candidate in political science, Yale University, for research in Japan on the emergence of local multiparty systems

Susan Shirk, Ph.D. candidate in political science, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, for research in Hong Kong on Chinese Communist university education

Douglas G. White, Ph.D. candidate in political science, Stanford University, for research in Hong Kong and Taiwan on Chinese Communist strategies of politically induced change in Tientsin, 1949-68

Edwin Winckler, Ph.D. candidate in government, Harvard University, for completion of research in Taiwan on the organizational process and mass compliance in Chinese society (renewal)

Kim Woodard, Ph.D. candidate in political science, Stanford University, for research in Hong Kong on fluctuation and recurring cycles in the making of Chinese Communist foreign policy, 1949-69

Stanley Bedlington, Ph.D. candidate in government, Cornell University, for research in Malaysia on the Alliance Party in Malaya and Sabah

Ronnie Lee Hatley, Ph.D. candidate in political science and in psychology, Yale University, for research in Indonesia on the psychological responses to social and political changes in Indonesia over the past 5 years

Benedict Kerkvliet, Ph.D. candidate in political science, University of Wisconsin, for completion of research and preparation of a dissertation in the Philippines and the United States on the Huk revolt (renewal)

John Dolfin, III, Ph.D. candidate in government, Columbia University, for research in London, India, and Hong Kong on the role of administrative organizations in the development of a national community

Mary Fainsod Katzenstein, Ph.D. candidate in political science, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, for research in India on the social consequences of migration: Bombay

Philip K. Oldenburg, Ph.D. candidate in political science, University of Chicago, for completion of research and preparation of a dissertation in India and the United States on urban politics in India (renewal)

Michael Van Dusen, Ph.D. candidate in political science, Johns Hopkins University, for completion of research and preparation of a dissertation in Lebanon and the United States on intra- and intergenerational conflicts in Syrian civil military relations (renewal)

Soviet and Eastern Europe

George Breslauer, Ph.D. candidate in political science, University of Michigan, for completion of research and preparation of a dissertation on decision making and implementation in the Soviet Union (renewal)

W. Harriet Critchley, Ph.D. candidate in government, Columbia University, for research in the United States and Europe on the 1921-29 political system in Yugoslavia.

Brian Silver, Ph.D. candidate in political science, University of Wisconsin, for research on the nationalities problem

Western Europe

James M. Danziger, Ph.D. candidate in political science, Stanford University, for directed reading on English cultural parties and pressure groups, and research in England on the process of budgetary decision-making in 4 English county boroughs

Helen Feldstein, Ph.D. candidate in political science, Yale University, for completion of research and preparation of a dissertation in France and the United States on French administrative adaptation to European economic community membership (renewal)

Henry Nau, Ph.D. candidate in international relations, Johns Hopkins University, School of Advanced International Studies, for research and preparation of a dissertation in West Germany, France, Italy, and the United States on inter-governmental cooperation among the major Western European countries in key sectors of modern technology (renewal)

Alan R. Posner, Ph.D. candidate in government, Columbia University, for completion of research and preparation of a dissertation in Italy and the United States on Italy and the Atlantic Alliance (renewal)

Ezra Suleiman, Ph.D. candidate in government, Columbia University, for preparation of a dissertation on the directors of the French Central Administration under the Fourth and Fifth Republics and in selected years of the Third Republic (renewal)

Latin America and the Caribbean

Morris J. Blachman, Ph.D. candidate in politics, New York University, for research on social class and community in Brazil at the metropolitan and national levels, in affiliation with Candido Mendes Faculty, Rio de Janeiro

Brent W. Brown, Ph.D. candidate in political science, University of Illinois, for research on municipal finance in a developing country: a case study of Belo Horizonte, Brazil, in affiliation with the Institute of Administration, Federal University of Rio Grande do Sul

Henry A. Dietz, Ph.D. candidate in political science, Stanford University, for research on the assimilation and politicization of urban squatter migrants in Lima, in affiliation with the Center for Social, Economic, Political, and Anthropological Research, Catholic University, Lima

Brian E. Loveman, Ph.D. candidate in political science, Indiana University, for research on the politics of development in Chilean rural and peasant organizations, in affiliation with the Institute for Training and Research on Agrarian Reform, Catholic University, Santiago

Michael A. Quinn, Ph.D. candidate in political science, University of Illinois, for research on the professional and political roles of planning experts in Brazil, in affiliation with the Institute of Administration, Federal University of Rio Grande do Sul

Christopher G. Abel, D.Phil. candidate in politics, University of Oxford, for research on conservatism in Colombia, 1930-53, in affiliation with the Faculty of Economics and Social Sciences, Pontifical University Javierana, Bogota

Kenneth E. Sharpe, Ph.D. candidate in political science, Yale University, for research on the relationship of inequality and control mechanisms for different rural social groups in the Dominican Republic, in affiliation with the Department of Social Sciences, Catholic University Madre y Maestra, Santiago de los Caballeros

NSF Grants

To help social scientists develop indicators designed to measure trends and changes in our society, the National Science Foundation has awarded a planning grant to the Social Science Research Council for program development on social measurement.

The Council will prepare for NSF and other interested research organizations a comprehensive plan for scientific studies to be conducted outside the Government on social measurement.

The one-year development study will be under the general supervision of Dr. Henry W. Riecken, President of SSRC; specific plan development and other staff work will be the responsibility of Dr. Donald S. Shoup, Staff Associate, who is the project director. The NSF award totals $21,800.

Another $362,916 grant made jointly by NSF and the National Institute of Mental Health will support a new program at Northwestern University designed to help lawyers and social scientists function more effectively in dealing with social problems. Under the five year program, which started this fall, students will receive both the J.D. and Ph.D. degrees. As a part of the program, participants will spend their first two summers on the program in a special team research training project with both legal and social aspects. The first summer's program will emphasize legal issues and the second, social science and its methodology.

Kansas State University has received a grant of $231,000 from NSF for a joint project of political scientists and physicists to study safeguards against the piracy of nuclear materials used in the production of peaceful atomic reactions and converting them into bombs. T. A. Williams will head the group of political scientists working on the project.