

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

DAVID KETTLER is a Professor of Political Studies at Trent University, Peterborough, Ontario. His publications include The Social and Political Thought of Adam Ferguson (Columbus: Ohio State University Press, 1965), Marxismus und Kultur: Lukács in den Ungarischer Revolutionen, 1918/19 (Neuwied: Luchterhand Verlag, 1967), and Karl Mannheim (London: Ellis Horwood, 1984), as well as numerous articles.

PAT O'MALLEY is a Senior Lecturer in the Department of Legal Studies at La Trobe University, Melbourne, and editor of Law in Context.

CYRIL D. ROBINSON is a Professor at the Crime Study Center, Southern Illinois University at Carbondale, Illinois. He received his LL.B. degree in 1952 from Northwestern University School of Law and has taught at University of Michigan Law School, Marquette University Law School, and Penn State University, Department of Community Development. He has written numerous articles on police history and is the author of Legal Rights, Duties and Liabilities of Criminal Justice Personnel (Springfield, IL: Charles C. Thomas, 1984).

AUSTIN SARAT is Professor of Political Science at Amherst College. He has published articles on the emergence and transformation of disputes, access to justice, and the costs of civil litigation. He is currently studying lawyer-client interaction, the transmission of legal ideology, and the generation and processing of product liability and mass injury litigation.

RICHARD SCAGLION is Associate Professor of Anthropology at the University of Pittsburgh. He was Director of Customary Law Development for the Law Reform Commission of Papua New Guinea. His interests include conflict-management techniques in tribal societies and legal developments in the Pacific.

SUSAN S. SILBEY is an Associate Professor of Sociology at Wellesley College. She has published articles on the enforcement of consumer protection regulations, legal practices in the lower courts, and mediation of minor disputes. She has recently been exploring the theoretical foundations of the sociology of law and is currently studying the presence of law in the education and lives of children.

NEIL VIDMAR is Professor of Psychology and Professor of Law at the University of Western Ontario, London, Canada. He also holds an appointment as Vice-President for Research at the Private Adjudication Center of Duke Law School, Durham, North Carolina. His research interests include dispute resolution procedures, the social psychological dynamics of legal punishment, and jury behavior. He has recently coauthored a book with Valerie Hans entitled Judging the Jury (New York: Plenum, 1986).

MIRIAM J. WELLS is an Associate Professor of Anthropology in the Department of Applied Behavioral Sciences, and Associate Research Anthropologist in the Agricultural Experiment Station at the University of California, Davis.