EDITORIAL

WE think that subscribers may be glad to know that a ten-year Index for the years 1931-1940 has been prepared and is now ready for distribution to those wishing to have it. Four hundred copies have been printed and at present two-hundred have been bound. Copies may be obtained from the Publishers, Headley Brothers, 109 Kingsway, W.C.2, at 10/- each, post free. The preparation of the Index has involved a considerable amount of work, but so many subscribers seem to have found the previous ten-year Index very helpful and have written to ask when the next one was to be published, that we hope the present volume may prove equally useful. It will be noticed that this Index does not bring the subject matter of the Journal up-to-date and it is possible that we may be able to supplement it by a five-year Index.

We should also like to draw the attention of subscribers to the publication in a single volume of the excellent series of articles written by various members of the Royal Air Force Otolaryngological Department, which have appeared in the Journal from time to time. These articles are a notable contribution to Aviation Medicine and it was thought that many subscribers might like to have them collected for reference.

WALTER HOWARTH.
