

specialist neuropsychiatry unit based at Frenchay Hospital, Bristol, founded in 1939 by Mrs Rosa Burden, wife of the Revd Harold Nelson Burden, who set up the first national hospital for people with mental and psychiatric disorders.<sup>1</sup> However, when a colleague communicated the decision to our patient's family, they became upset, saying they did not feel he was a 'burden' and needed to be bundled off to a 'burden centre'. Our hapless colleague, being unaware of how the Burden centre came to be named thus, was unable to placate them, and it fell to us to assuage their feelings. Fortunately, the Institute's website (www.bristol.ac.uk/neuroscience/clinical/bni/) and an excellent article in the Psychiatric Bulletin from 20 years ago<sup>2</sup> came to our rescue. We too came to realise that the 'Burden centre', far from being an unfortunate moniker, was a fitting tribute to the Burdens, who dedicated their lives to improving the lot of mental health patients in this country.
