

People in Political Science

as a Non-Resident Senior Fellow in the Governmental Studies Program.

Kenton W. Worcester, program associate to the Joint Committee on Western Europe, Social Science Research Council.

Promotions

Gayle Binion, professor of political science, University of California, Santa Barbara.

Mel Hailey, professor of political science, Abilene Christian University.

Visiting and Temporary Appointment

Pippa Norris, Edinburgh University, is currently visiting the Kennedy School of Government, Harvard University, until October 1993.

Award Recipients

Harriman Chair

Thomas Mann, Governmental Studies Director, Brookings Institution, has been named the first recipient of the W. Averell Harriman Chair in American Governance.

The Harriman Chair was established at Brookings by Pamela Harriman in honor of the 100th anniversary of the birth of her late husband, W. Averell Harriman, the former U.S. ambassador to the Soviet Union and Great Britain, secretary of commerce, governor of New York, and adviser to several presidents.

Thomas Mann
Photo by Stephanie Gross

Mann joined Brookings as Governmental Studies director in 1987, overseeing about 30 resident and non-resident scholars studying American governmental and political institutions, processes of policy-making, and domestic policy issues. The program seeks to increase the nation's understanding of contemporary issues of governance and policy.

Mann holds a bachelor's degree from the University of Florida and a master's and a Ph.D. from the University of Michigan. A former executive director of the American Political Science Association, he has published numerous books, articles, and opinion pieces on various aspects of American politics.

New York State Political Science Association

The following awards were presented by the New York State Political Science Association:

Best Paper by a Faculty Member at the 1991 Annual Meeting:

Madeline Tress, Center for Jewish Studies, CUNY, "The Last Frontier: Women in Gush Emunim."

Best Paper by a Graduate Student at the 1991 Annual Meeting:

Michael John Burton, SUNY at Albany, "The Betamax in Judge Ferguson's Court: Technological Proliferation as a Problem in Judicial Policy-Making (and Deference to Innovation as One Judge's Solution)."

Best Paper by an Undergraduate Student at the 1991 Annual Meeting (2 winners):

John Kania, Niagara University, "The Ramifications of the Participation in Government Courses on Students' Political Knowledge."

Michael Yehl, Alfred University, "Oral Argument and Unanimity in Supreme Court Decision-Making."

International Research and Exchanges Board Travel Grants

The following have received travel grants from the International Research and Exchanges Board:

James M. Broadus, travel to Moscow to continue a cooperative project between The Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution's Marine Policy Center and the USSR Academy of Science's Institute of World Economy and International Relations, entitled "Environmental Security and the World Ocean."

David R. Cameron, to lecture at the 3rd International Political Science School in Tallinn, Estonia on one or more of the following: Markets and Democracy; Creating New Political Parties in the Transition to Confederation in Comparative Perspective.

Samuel Fizman, to bring two scholars from Poland to the U.S. to present papers and participate in a conference at Indiana University on "The Bicentennial of the Polish Constitution of May 3, 1791 and the Tradition of Polish Democracy."

Banning N. Garrett, to explore hypotheses for overcoming the military confrontation in Northeast Asia between the U.S., Japan, and the USSR, by visiting Soviet scholars and officials to discuss the prospects and possible modalities for easing tensions and enhancing security cooperation in the region.

Charles Z. Jokay, travel to Budapest to detail Hungary's "Central European" foreign policy and to assess the ability of such a regional orientation to expedite the country's integration into the European Community, by conducting interviews in research institutes, ministries, and with the diplomatic community.

Anthony Jones, a joint study sponsored by Southern Illinois University, the USSR Academy of Sciences Institute of Sociology, and the National Public Opinion Center in Moscow, which is entitled "Perestroika in Soviet Culture," and is an interpretive survey of major trends in Soviet culture. U.S. project coordinators are Anthony Jones and Dmitri Shalin.

Peter H. Juviler, travel to the USSR to complete work under the general theme, "Human Rights in Post-communist Societies: The Soviet Revolution in Velvet and Iron." Specifically, to assess the development and application of Union and inter-republic treaties; USSR and republic constitutions and their implications for human rights; human rights as issues and standards in reshaping law and politics.

Roderick L. MacFarquhar, travel to the USSR to lecture at the Institute of Far Eastern Studies of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, on Chinese Communist politics and history.

David M. Olson, to lecture at the International School of Political Science at the Sakala Institute in Estonia, on comparative parliaments and American politics.

Hugh Ragsdale, consultations in Moscow with seven colleagues on a translation and editing of their papers presented at a conference on "Traditions of Imperial Russian Foreign Policy" held at the Kennan Institute in October 1990.

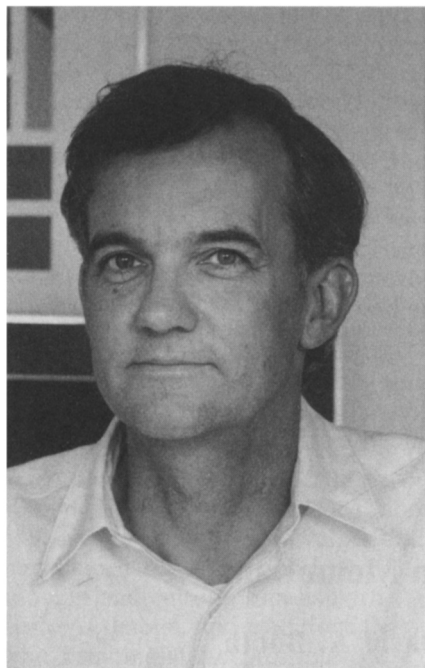

Ian Shapiro, to lecture on pluralism and democratic politics at the Institute Sakala in Tallin, Estonia.

1991 Phi Beta Kappa Award

Edward R. Tufte, professor of political science and statistics, and Senior Critic in Graphic Design at Yale University, has received the 1991 Phi Beta Kappa Award in Science for his recent book Envisioning Information. The $2500 prize is for "outstanding contributions by scientists to the literature of science." It is the eighth award for Envisioning Information, which Tufte wrote, designed, and published.

Carnegie Council Student Essay Contest Winner

Steve Brinkoetter, a graduate student in political science at the University of Southern California, has been selected by the Carnegie Council on Ethics and International Affairs as their first Student Essay Contest award winner. As winner, his article, "Help for Bush's New World Order," will be published in Volume 6 of the Council's annual journal, Ethics & International Affairs, to be released in April.

Edward R. Tufte
Photo by Peter Johnson

For more information on the journal or contest guidelines, contact: Matthew Mattern, Carnegie Council on Ethics and International Affairs, 170 East 64th Street, New York, NY 10021.

Other Awards and Honors

Charles Anderson's Pragmatic Liberalism is the 1992 winner of the Elaine and David Spitz Book Award.

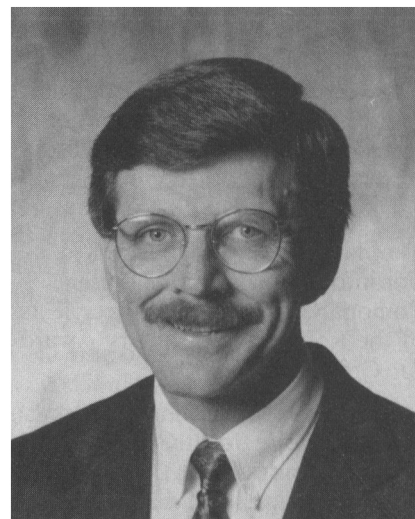

Archie Brown, professor of politics at Oxford University, was elected a Fellow of the British Academy in 1991. During the 1990-91 academic year Brown held the Frank C. Erwin, Jr. Centennial Chair in Government as a visiting professor at the University of Texas at Austin.

Susan E. Clarke, department of political science, University of Colorado, received an NSF grant to study minority and neighborhood representation of interests in local economic development projects in eight American cities.

Oskar Gruenwald, editor of Journal of Interdisciplinary Studies, was nominated to Delta Tau Kappa, the International Social Science Honor Society, for outstanding scholastic achievement.

Mel Hailey, chairman of Abilene Christian University's political science department, was presented the Trustees' Award as Outstanding Teacher of the Year.

Mel Hailey

Robert D. Holsworth received Virginia Commonwealth University's 1991 Distinguished Teacher Award.

Rasma Karklins has been given an award in the "Grants for Research & Writing Program on Peace and International Cooperation" of the John

Rasma Karklins

D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation. The grant is for a study on "Democratization and Ethnopolitics in the USSR: Latvia 1986-1992," during the period between August 1991 and January 1993. The study focuses on grassroots political initiatives and multi-ethnic coalition building. She has also been elected a Vice President of the International Society for Political Psychology.

Ellis Krauss, professor of political science, University of Pittsburgh, fellowship at the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars, January 1-May 31, 1992.

Thomas L. Pangle, University of Toronto, and Martha Andresen, Pomona College, were co-recipients of the Robert Foster Cherry Award for Great Teachers.

David Price, United States Representative from North Carolina's Fourth Congressional District and a professor of political science on leave from Duke University, has been selected to receive the National Capital Area Political Science Association 1992 Pi Sigma Alpha Award.

Congressman and Professor David E. Price (D-NC, 4th District, Duke University) was given the 1992 Pi Sigma Alpha Award by James A. Thurber (American University), President of the National Capital Area Political Science Association at the Association's Annual Spring Conference, Mt. Vernon College, February 28, 1992.

Michael Sodaro, an associate professor of political science and international affairs at the George Washington University, was awarded the Marshall Shulman Prize for his book Moscow, Germany, and the West from Khrushchev to Gorbachev. The award is given by the American Association for the Advancement of Slavic Studies to the best book of the year on Soviet foreign policy.

Antje Wiener, Carleton College, received an APSA travel grant funded by the Ford Foundation.

In Memoriam

David A. Booth

David A. Booth, professor of political science at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, died at home on October 20, 1991. He had undergone two successful heart bypass operations in the past several years and had continued his active, energetic pace of life. In early October, however, following a summer of poor health, he was hospitalized once more and never regained full strength. He was sixty-one.

Born in London, England, David was educated at Wycliffe College and the London School of Economics. He graduated from the University of Virginia in Charlottesville with a master's degree in foreign affairs in 1953 and a doctorate in political science in 1957. He was elected to Phi Beta Kappa while at the University and was a member of the American Political Science Association and the Southern Political Science Association.

David began his teaching career at Vanderbilt University in 1957, moving from there to Michigan State University and then to the University of Kentucky, before coming to the University of Massachusetts in 1967. He was a gifted and enthusiastic teacher who always held a strong, personal concern for his students in urban, metropolitan, and state politics. He was always readily available to his students and was willing to spend countless hours helping them in their studies, internships, and career choices. His teaching skills were rewarded in 1966 at Kentucky when he was named a Distinguished Kentucky Educator and at Massachusetts in 1991 when he won the Pi Sigma Alpha Distinguished Teaching Award. During his teaching career David also served as consultant to about thirty Massachusetts local governments on issues ranging from police administration to municipal home rule.

In campus affairs at Amherst, David represented the very best in what is expected of a university citizen. He served four terms in the Faculty Senate, was its secretary for two years, and was elected presiding officer four times. He served on numerous Faculty Senate and other University committees during the 1970s and 1980s, researching and writing countless lengthy reports for both the dean of Arts and Sciences and the chancellor. He was an active, concerned, departmental citizen as well, always willing to take on the more mundane but necessary committee assignments.

From 1984 to 1989 he was president of the Faculty Club, during which time Club membership was increased, the grounds were extensively landscaped, many pleasant interior refurbishments were accomplished, and a new club manager and chef were recruited with resultant menu improvements. His extensive contributions to a better university were recognized in 1989 when he received the Chancellor's Medal for Distinguished Public Service.

David was a warm, caring human being, blessed with a delightful sense of humor and his own fine British accent. He will be sorely missed by his many friends and colleagues. Contributions in his memory may be made out to the University of Massachusetts Foundation, marked for the "David A. Booth Memorial" and mailed to the Department of Political Science, University of Massachusetts at Amherst, Amherst, MA 01003.

Edwin A. Gere, Jr.
University of Massachusetts, Amherst

Thomas A. Flinn

Thoms Augustin Flinn, professor of political science at Cleveland State