Volumes I and II

MICHAEL LOEWE

A selection of 700 fragments of archival material on the sparsely-documented Han dynasty (202 B.C.—220 A.D.), the first of China's imperial dynasties to exist on a long-term basis.

Volume I, which is intended for general students of Chinese subjects and may also interest students of imperial history and epigraphy, explains the archaeological and historical contexts of the fragments; the means of compiling and despatching documents during the Han period; the Han advance towards Central Asia; the organization of the Han forces. These chapters are illustrated by citations from selected fragments, which are fully presented for specialist scholars in Volume II, with introductory notes, text, translation and textual notes. Volume I 52s. 6d. net; Volume II £6 6s. net
