In the Fall 1972 issue of PS, page 484, William M. Berenson was listed as receiving a Research Fellowship. It should have read Israel Rivera Ortiz instead of Berensen. PS regrets this error.

In Memoriam

Hiram Miller Stout

Hiram Miller Stout, first Dean of the School of Public and International Affairs at The George Washington University, died on November 11, 1972 at the age of 67 after a long illness. His colleagues and students, as well as the academic and governmental community of the Nation's capital, lost an inspiring professional colleague.

Professor Stout combined three distinguished careers in his lifetime. First of all, he was an educator who enjoyed teaching and developed a warm and devoted student following. He received his A.B. at DePauw University and his Ph.D. in Government at Harvard. He taught at both of these Universities, served as Visiting Professor at Duke and American Universities, and held the Ernest J. King Chair of Maritime History at the U.S. Naval War College in Newport, Rhode Island. In addition to his administrative duties at The George Washington University, he taught for ten years as Professor of International Affairs and Political Science and inspired those who worked with him.

A second career was that of the devoted civil servant. On active duty as an Air Force Colonel in World War II, Hiram Stout held military intelligence assignments both in London and Washington. After the War, working with the State Department and related government agencies, he distinguished himself as a specialist in the politics of Western Europe. His book on British government and politics, published in 1953, aroused a great deal of professional admiration. During this period of government service, Hiram Stout was also an active member of the political science fraternity. For The American Political Science Review, he regularly edited a column on outstanding foreign
