French Colonial Rule and the Baule Peoples

Resistance and Collaboration 1889–1911

Timothy C. Weiskel

This book tells the story of Baule resistance to French colonial rule in the Ivory Coast from the time of the first contact until the end of the final battles of conquest in 1911. While the work constitutes both an anthropological and a historical study of a particular group under early French colonialism, it also offers insights that help to clarify broader theoretical debates over the nature of European imperialism and the character of colonial rule in Africa. Illustrated £16.50 Oxford Studies in African Affairs

An Economic History of Central Niger

Stephen Baier

The author traces the economic history of a region of the West African Sahel from 1850 to 1960. This is the first major study of the effects of the reorientation of overseas trade away from trans-Saharan routes, and the first detailed account of the consequences of overseas trade on a West African nation's economy and its internal trade in staple products. £11 Oxford Studies in African Affairs

The Europeans in the Sudan, 1834-1878

Some Manuscripts, mostly unpublished, written by Traders, Christian Missionaries, Officials, and others

Translated and edited by Paul Santi and Richard Hill

In the mid-nineteenth century the Sudan was an obscure corner of the Ottoman Empire, into which few Europeans penetrated. This book consists of a selection from the writings of those traders, government officials, and missionaries who ventured into the region. All in their way were attempting to introduce the benefits of Western culture. Illustrated £15 Oxford Studies in African Affairs

Health in Tropical Africa during the Colonial Period

D. J. Bradley, K. Kirkwood and E. E. Sabben-Clare

This book records the views of some of those who took a leading part in the development of health services in Africa during the latter part of the colonial period. These views are often necessarily subjective, but the book will provide a quarry for historians of Africa in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. It also shows how Western medicine came to grips with the problems of combating such scourges as malaria, yellow fever, yaws, and leprosy. Illustrated £10

The Journal of MODERN AFRICAN STUDIES

Editor: DAVID KIMBLE

Vice-Chancellor, University of Malawi

A quarterly survey of politics, economics and related topics in contemporary Africa, publishing articles and book reviews. The main emphasis is upon the peoples and policies, the problems and progress of this dynamic and disparate continent; upon the many societies that are evolving rather than the essential characteristics of the old; and upon the present, rather than the past. The best current work is sought from specialists in different academic disciplines, whose contributions can illuminate and cross-fertilize one another. Editorial policy avoids commitment to any political viewpoint or ideology but aims at a fair examination of controversial issues. The journal seeks to promote a deeper understanding of what is happening in Africa today.

CONTRIBUTIONS

Contributions to the Journal are welcomed. They may be submitted in either English or French. They should not exceed about 6000 words (excluding footnotes), except with the prior approval of the Editors. A summary of the contents of the article, not exceeding about 300 words in length, should be attached on a separate sheet. Contributors are asked to observe closely the conventions listed in the Notes for Contributors, Vol. XV, pp. 173-4. It is essential that contributors observe these conventions, as the Journal now goes straight into page proof. This severely limits the number of corrections which are possible.

Page proofs will be sent, if necessary by airmail, to each contributor (or his nominee) provided that the Editors have been given an address through which he can be reached without delay. Corrections should be kept to the minimum, and should be corrections, not new material. If they are to be incorporated in the master proof corrected by the Editors, it is important that the contributor should return the page proofs, by airmail if necessary, to the Editor named when they are sent out (and not to the Cambridge University Press), within ten days of his receipt of them.

Contributors of articles and review articles receive 25 free offprints. Additional offprints may be obtained at reasonable cost, provided that they are ordered before publication on the special form sent out with the page proofs.

All contributions and books for review should be addressed to The Editors, The Journal of African History, School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London, London, W.C.1.
