

ABOUT THE CONTRIBUTORS AND CONFERENCE PARTICIPANTS

- ◆ RICHARD L. ABEL, UCLA Law School.
- ◆ JAMES J. ALFINI, Director of Research of the American Judicature Society, received his J.D. from Northwestern University in 1972. He is the author of monographs and articles on various issues on judicial administration. Most recently, his research interests have focused on planned organizational change in state courts and judge/jury communications. He is coauthor of Juror Lawlessness (Plenum, forthcoming).
- ◆ ALBERT W. ALSCHULER teaches law at the University of Colorado.
- ◆ JOHN BALDWIN is Lecturer in Judicial Administration at the Institute of Judicial Administration in the University of Birmingham, England. He holds degrees in social science from Birmingham and in criminology from Cambridge and Sheffield Universities. He is coauthor of the The Urban Criminal (Tavistock, 1976); Negotiated Justice (Martin Robertson, 1977); Criminal Justice: Selected Readings (Martin Robertson, 1978) and Jury Trials (Oxford University Press, 1979).
- ◆ ILENE NAGEL BERNSTEIN is Associate Professor of Law and Sociology at Indiana University's School of Law and Department of Sociology. She has published articles in the American Sociological Review, Social Forces, and Social Science Research. Her previous research was directed toward the assessment of the bases of decisionmaking in state criminal courts. The present paper is part of her ongoing research (with John Hagan) on decisionmaking in federal District Courts from bail through sentencing.
- ◆ CONRAD G. BRUNK is Assistant Professor of Philosophy and Director of the Programme in Peace and Conflict Studies at Conrad Grebel College, University of Waterloo. His doctoral research at Northwestern University was in the philosophy of law; his dissertation is entitled "The Idea of a 'Right' to Freedom of Conscience." His current research interests include ethical issues in law and medicine, law as a conflict resolution mechanism, and ethical considerations in human conflict and conflict resolution.

◆ Conference participant.

◆ Contributor to this volume.

- ◆ SAM W. CALLAN is a general jurisdiction court judge in El Paso, Texas, where he formerly served as an assistant felony prosecutor and then as a municipal court judge. While engaged in private practice there, he was selected to be a charter member of the association of criminal defense attorneys when they organized in Texas. He received his law degree from Texas University in 1951.
- ◆ LIEF H. CARTER has taught political science at the University of Georgia since 1973. He is the author of The Limits of Order (1974) and Reason in Law (1979).
- ◆ SILVIA S. G. CASALE is a graduate of Oxford University. After working for Gunnar Myrdal in the Stockholm Institute for International Economic Studies and the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute, she received her Ph.D. in political science from Yale University. She is currently the Deputy Director of the Family Court Disposition Study at the Vera Institute of Justice in New York.
- ◆ THOMAS W. CHURCH, JR., is Associate Professor of Political Science at Oakland University. He has recently completed a national study of trial court delay for the National Center for State Courts. Other previous work includes a study of plea bargaining reform. He is currently working on a comparative study of four felony trial courts.
- ◆ JAMES EISENSTEIN, Political Science, Pennsylvania State University.
- ◆ PAUL ESTAVER, National Institute of Law Enforcement and Criminal Justice, LEAA.
- ◆ MALCOLM M. FEELEY received his Ph.D. from the University of Minnesota and has taught at NYU, Yale, and the University of Wisconsin. He has written extensively on law and social science and criminal justice administration, and is the author of the forthcoming books, The Process is the Punishment (Russell Sage Foundation) and (with Austin Sarat) Reforming Criminal Justice: The Crisis of Theory and Practice in the Law Enforcement Administration (University of Minnesota Press). He is currently engaged in a study of innovation in criminal courts for The Twentieth Century Fund.

◆ WILLIAM L. F. FELSTINER is Senior Research Associate at the Social Science Research Institute, University of Southern California. He has published many papers on dispute processing theory and alternatives to litigation.

◆ ETHEL FOSTER, National Criminal Justice Executive Training Program.

◆ CHARLES E. FRAZIER received his Ph.D. in sociology from Southern Illinois University, Carbondale, in 1973. He is Associate Professor of Sociology at the University of Florida and director of an experiment in juvenile diversion funded by LEAA. His research interests are sociology of law and life history studies of deviant careers; his current research is on bail.

◆ LAWRENCE M. FRIEDMAN is Marion Rice Kirkwood Professor of Law at Stanford University. He is the author of A History of American Law (Simon & Schuster, 1973), The Legal System: A Social Science Perspective (Russell Sage Foundation, 1975), and many other books and articles on law. He is currently working on a number of quantitative, historical studies of the work of courts. He is President-elect of the Law and Society Association.

◆ AVRUM GROSS, Attorney General, Alaska.

◆ JOHN HAGAN is Associate Professor of Sociology at the University of Toronto. He has published articles in the American Sociological Review, the British Journal of Sociology, Social Forces, and Social Problems. His current research includes an American study of the social organization of criminal justice processing decisions in the federal District Courts (with Ilene Bernstein) and a Canadian study of victim involvement in the criminal justice system. His most recent book is The Disreputable Pleasures (Toronto: McGraw-Hill Ryerson, 1977).

◆ MARK H. HALLER is Professor of History and Acting Chairman of the Department of Criminal Justice at Temple University. He received his Ph.D. (1959) from the University of Wisconsin. His chief research interests lie in the historical structure of crime in American cities and the relationship of crime to politics, geography, and ethnicity. He is the author of numerous articles dealing with the history of American crime and criminal justice.

- ◆ CRAIG HANEY received his Ph.D. in psychology and his J.D. from Stanford University, where he was a Russell Sage Resident in Law and Social Science (1974-76). He is currently Assistant Professor of Psychology at the University of California, Santa Cruz, and does criminal defense work in Northern California.
- ◆ ANNE M. HEINZ received her Ph.D. in political science from Northwestern University in 1971. She has taught at the University of Illinois, Chicago Circle, and has conducted research on legal socialization and on the politics of criminal law. She is currently Research Associate at the Center for Studies in Criminal Justice of the University of Chicago Law School and Project Manager of "Governmental Responses to Crime" and of an LEAA research grant at Northwestern University.
- ◆ TY HODANISH, National Criminal Justice Executive Training Program.
- ◆ MILTON HEUMANN is Assistant Professor of Political Science at the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor. His principal research interests are in the areas of criminal justice and civil liberties. He is the author of Plea Bargaining (University of Chicago Press, 1978), and is currently engaged in a study of the effects of sentencing and plea bargaining reforms in Detroit.
- ◆ JONATHAN M. HYMAN is an Associate Professor of Law of Rutgers—The State University at Newark. After receiving his LL.B. degree from Yale University he taught at the Northwestern Legal Assistance Clinic at Northwestern University Law School, where he also represented criminal defendants. He is currently the Administrative Director of the Constitutional Litigation Clinic at Rutgers and is working on an analysis of the impact of a "just deserts" model of sentencing on prosecutorial discretion and plea bargaining.
- ◆ JACK KATZ began his study of prosecution while a Research Associate at Yale Law School. He is now Assistant Professor of Sociology at UCLA. His article, "Lawyers for the Poor in Transition," appeared in the Winter, 1978, issue of the Review.
- ◆ WAYNE A. KERSTETTER received his J.D. from the University of Chicago in 1967. He has combined research on criminal justice with administrative positions, having been Assistant First Deputy Police Commissioner in New York City and Superintendent of the Illinois Bureau of Investigation. He is currently Associate Professor of Criminal Justice at the University of Illinois, Chicago Circle, and Clarence Day Fellow at the Center for Studies in Criminal Justice of the University of Chicago Law School.

- ◆ KENNETH KIPNIS is Assistant Professor of Philosophy and Chairperson of the Department of Philosophy at Lake Forest College in Lake Forest, Illinois. He is the editor of Philosophical Issues and Law: Cases and Materials (Prentice-Hall, 1976) and is currently interested in philosophical aspects of the ethics of lawyers and other professionals.
- ◆ SAMUEL KRISLOV is Professor of Politics at Brandeis University, on leave from the University of Minnesota. He is a former editor of the Law & Society Review and has served as President of the Midwest Political Science Association and the Law and Society Association. His current research is on causes and prediction of caseloads, a project of the Committee on Research on Law Enforcement and Criminal Justice of the National Academy of Sciences, which he chairs.
- ◆ JOHN H. LANGBEIN is Professor of Law at the University of Chicago.
- ◆ CHARLES LEVIN, Associate Justice, Supreme Court of Michigan.
- ◆ COLIN LOFTIN is an Assistant Professor of Sociology at the University of Michigan. He has a Ph.D. from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and is currently involved in research on crime and crime control in Detroit, which includes the 1979 Detroit Area Study and the study of the Michigan Felony Firearm Law.
- ◆ MICHAEL J. LOWY received his Ph.D. in Anthropology from the University of California, Berkeley (1971), and his J.D. from Stanford Law School (1978). He was awarded a Law and Modernization Fellowship (1973-74) and was a Russell Sage Resident in Law and Social Science (1975-77). He is currently the director of the California Public Interest Research Group (CalPIRG) at Santa Clara University and teaches anthropology at De Anza College.

- ◆ CHERYL MARTORANA, National Institute of Law Enforcement and Criminal Justice, LEAA.
- ◆ ALBERT R. MATHENY is Assistant Professor of Political Science at the University of Florida, completing a Ph.D. from the University of Minnesota. His dissertation is an organizational analysis of plea bargaining. He is also interested in comparative legal systems and is presently studying the relationship between stratification in the legal profession and procedural reform in the courts of several states.
- ◆ LYNN M. MATHER is Assistant Professor of Government at Dartmouth College. She is the author of Plea Bargaining or Trial? The Process of Criminal Case Disposition (Lexington Books, 1979). Her current research is directed toward the development of an empirical theory of conflict management and trial court processes.
- ◆ MICHAEL McCONVILLE is Lecturer in Law at the University of Birmingham, England. He holds degrees in law from the Universities of London and Nottingham. He is coauthor of Negotiated Justice (Martin Robertson, 1977) and Jury Trials (Oxford University Press, 1979).
- ◆ WILLIAM F. McDONALD is Associate Professor of Sociology and Deputy Director of the Institute of Criminal Law and Procedure at Georgetown University. He received a D. Crim. in 1970 from the University of California, Berkeley. He is coauthor of the Georgetown University study of plea bargaining, and has published on the police, prosecutors, victimless crime, drug enforcement, and victimology. He is currently directing a national study of police-prosecutor relations.
- ◆ JAMES McMULLEN, Office for Improvements in the Administration of Justice, U.S. Department of Justice.
- ◆ JAKE ROBERTS, National Criminal Justice Executive Training Program.
- ◆ MICHAEL L. RUBINSTEIN received a B.A. in 1964 from the University of Michigan and an LL.B. from Columbia University School of Law in 1967. A member of the bars of New York and Alaska, he has practiced privately for six years in Alaska, specializing in criminal defense. Since July 1975 he has been Executive Director of the Alaska Judicial Council.
- ◆ JOHN PAUL RYAN, Senior Research Associate of the American Judicature Society, received his Ph.D. in political science from Northwestern University in 1972. He is the author of a monograph on political participation among minority groups, and coauthor of The Supreme Court in American Politics: Policy through Law (American Political Science Association, 1975) and America's Trial Judges at Work: The Role of Organizational Influences (Free Press, forthcoming). His research interests center upon the relationship between policy and management issues in trial courts.

- ◆ AUSTIN SARAT, currently on the staff of the Office for Improvements in the Administration of Justice, will be re-joining the faculty of Amherst College this summer. He will, in addition, be working on the Civil Litigation Research Project at the University of Wisconsin and conducting research on the dynamics of dispute processing and on sentencing problems and patterns in white-collar cases. He is currently writing an essay on citizen participation and access to justice, as well as completing a book entitled, Thinking about Courts: Traditional Expectations and Contemporary Challenges.
- ◆ KARL F. SCHUMANN is Professor of Criminology at the University of Bremen, West Germany. His current research topics are alternatives to prison, the organization of criminal justice systems, and the uses of social sciences in penal law. He has written books on the impact of social sanctions (Zeichen der Unfreiheit, 1968), on informal decisionmaking in criminal cases, such as plea bargaining (Der Handel mit Gerechtigkeit, 1977), and on the relationship between labor unions and prisoners (Gewerkschaften und Strafvollzug, 1978).
- ◆ SHELDON STEINBERG, University Research Corporation.
- ◆ JOYCE STERLING, University of Denver College of Law.
- ◆ SUSETTE M. TALARICO received her Ph.D. in political science from the University of Connecticut in 1976. She is Assistant Professor of Political Science at the University of Georgia. Her articles have been published or will appear in Jurimetrics Journal, Social Science Quarterly, Journal of Criminal Law and Criminology, Polity, and Journal of Criminal Justice among others. Her current research focuses on sentencing and sanction policy and policing styles and management.

- ◆ PAMELA UTZ, Center for the Study of Law and Society, University of California, Berkeley.
- ◆ TERESA J. WHITE received her B.A. from Kalamazoo College in 1963. After several years of research and administration in low income housing programs, she turned to criminal justice research. Since 1974 she has supervised several Judicial Council studies, including a 1973 sentencing and bail study, a study of judicial standards and goals, and the evaluation of plea bargaining published here.
- ◆ PAUL WILES is Senior Lecturer in the Faculty of Law and the Centre of Criminological Studies at the University of Sheffield, England. He is joint editor of the Law in Society Series (published by Martin Robertson & Co., London), and of the International Journal of the Sociology of Law. Recent publications include Law and Society (1979) (with C. M. Campbell) and The Sociology of Crime and Delinquency. Vol. 2: The New Criminologies (1978).
- ◆ HANS ZEISEL, University of Chicago Law School.