Encounter

ENCOUNTER, edited in London by Stephen Spender and Melvin J. Lasky, is the most widely read monthly of its type in the world. In the words of one reviewer, "it is by far the most vital and immediate of the English literary magazines, and unique in the way it sees letters as being in the thick of affairs."

ENCOUNTER's truly remarkable success (in the last few years the number of subscribers has more than trebled) can, we believe, be largely attributed to its awareness of contemporary trends. It has remained fully alive to the major political issues of the day, ably supported by such commentators as Joseph and Stewart Alsop, R. H. S. Crossman, Alastair Buchan, John Kenneth Galbraith, Raymond Aron and G. F. Hudson. It has always been sympathetic to the problems of the African and Asian states. Such recent articles have included: "Chinese Journey" by Alfred Fabre-Luce; "Africa, Black and White" by John Hatch, Russell Warren Howe and Colin Legum; "Trouble in the Air," a letter from Ghana by Peregrine Worsthorne; "Old Societies, New States" by Edward Shils; "Chairman Mao" by Richard Walker; "A Talk with Vinoba Bhave" by Sidney Hook.

ENCOUNTER is in such demand nowadays that several recent issues have sold out soon after publication. To avoid disappointment, please place a regular order. The subscription rate is 45s. (U.S.A. $7.50, India Rs.12) a year, including postage, payable to your newsagent or to ENCOUNTER, 25 Haymarket, London S.W.1.
