Notes on Contributors

KWAME ARHIN has been for many years the Director of the Institute of African Studies at the University of Ghana, and has published extensively on aspects of the political economy of Asante.

LAURENCE BECKER teaches in the Department of Agronomy at the University of Wisconsin at Madison. He has most recently been doing research on the agro-ecology of rice-cropping systems in Côte d'Ivoire.

RICHARD FARDON is Reader in West African Anthropology at the School of Oriental and African Studies, and Chairman of the Centre of African Studies, University of London. Among his recent publications is Between God, the Dead and the Wild: Chamba interpretations of ritual and religion (1991).

PETER GESCHIERE is Professor of African Anthropology at the University of Leiden. In 1993 he edited with Piet Konings a bilingual collection called Pathways of Accumulation in Cameroon/Itinéraires d'accumulation au Cameroun. He is working on a book about witchcraft and politics in Cameroon, La Viande des autres, to be published by Karthala, Paris.

EDWIN GYASI is Senior Lecturer in Geography and Resource Development at the University of Ghana. Since receiving his Ph.D. from the University of Wisconsin he has taught both in Ghana and in Nigeria, and currently has a year at the University of Canterbury, New Zealand.

REGINA SMITH OBOLER is Associate Professor of Anthropology and Sociology at Ursinus College, near Philadelphia, Pa. In 1985 she published Women, Power and Economic Change: the Nandi of Kenya. She is writing a work on fatherhood cross-culturally, as well as studying the effect of gender on people's preferences in genre fiction.

LUISE WHITE has taught in the Department of History at the University of Minnesota; currently she is at the National Humanities Center in North Carolina. Her book The Comforts of Home: prostitution in colonial Nairobi was co-winner of the African Studies Association's Herskovitz Prize in 1991. She is now working on a study of colonial African rumours about vampires.
