Christians in Ulster 1968–1980

Eric Gallagher and Stanley Worrall

This book describes and assesses the part played by the Churches in Northern Ireland's recent troubles. The authors, who have been personally involved in many of the episodes, write from an ecumenical viewpoint. They have tried to be fair to those with more traditional views. The part played by religious prejudice is recognized, but they give full weight to the courage and forgiveness shown by many Christians on both sides in struggling for reconciliation in a bitterly divided society. £10

Religion

Leszek Kolakowski

'Leszek Kolakowski has given us a highly readable and stimulating essay on religion. It is no mean achievement to be able to write of fundamental issues in the philosophy of religion in a way which makes them accessible to general readers as well as to philosophers and theologians.' The Times Higher Education Supplement. £9.50 Masterguides (also available as a Fontana Paperback)

Introduction to the Critical Study of the Text of the Hebrew Bible

J. Weingreen

The student of the Hebrew Bible will from time to time meet words and phrases which appear either incomprehensible or absurd. Many of these result from the perpetuation of copyists' errors, and in this book the student learns how to recognize the main types of these errors. £5.50

The Oxford Edition of the Works of John Wesley

Volume 26, Letters II, 1740–1755

Edited by Frank Baker

In this second volume of letters Wesley's personal life is revealed in correspondence between him and members of his family, especially his brother Charles. The book contains 270 letters from Wesley and 145 to him, the vast majority from eighteenth-century originals, many previously unpublished. Illustrated £35

The Journal of Ecclesiastical History

Editors

PETER LINEHAN St John's College, University of Cambridge

BRENDAN BRADSHAW Queens' College, University of Cambridge

The Journal of Ecclesiastical History is concerned with all aspects of the history of the Christian Church, both as an institution and in its relations with society at large and with other religions, from the earliest times to the present day. Each volume contains about fifteen articles and over a hundred reviews and short notices of books. 'Notes and Documents' are also published from time to time. Space is provided for comment arising from recent contributions. There is an increase in extent from 1982.

Religious Studies

Editor

H. D. LEWIS Emeritus Professor of the History and Philosophy of Religion, University of London

Assistant Editor

STEWART SUTHERLAND Professor of the History and Philosophy of Religion, University of London

The study of religion has been sharpened and intensified in recent years by the results of research in many fields including philosophy, psychology, history of religions and sociology. Religious Studies provides a forum for scholars in many disciplines to debate the nature and meaning of religious experience.

Authors are encouraged to develop their ideas fully while maintaining the highest standards of precision and clarity.

Religious Studies encourages interchange and juxtaposition of views by publishing groups of articles on the same theme, extended book reviews and replies to articles.

NOTES FOR CONTRIBUTORS

1. Contributions and books for review should be sent to the Editor, Professor H. D. Lewis, King's College, Strand, London, WC2R 2LS.
2. Articles submitted to the journal should in general be between 5,000 and 10,000 words long, though articles outside these limits will be acceptable if there is some good reason for their exceptional length or brevity. Articles in two or more parts may occasionally be accepted provided each part is independently intelligible. They should normally be in English.
3. Submission of an article is taken to imply that it has not previously been published, or is not being considered for publication elsewhere.
4. Contributions should be clearly typed in double spacing, preferably on A4 paper, with a wide left-hand margin. The typescript should be prepared to accord as closely as possible with the typographical conventions of the journal.
5. Footnotes should be used sparingly: in general, to give sources of direct quotations, references to main authorities on disputable questions, and evidence relied on for a new or unusual conclusion. They should be numbered in one sequence throughout the article, and should preferably be typed in double spacing at the end of the article.
6. Contributors should keep one copy of the typescript for correcting proofs.
7. First proofs may be read and corrected by contributors provided that they can give the Editor an address through which they can be reached without delay and can guarantee to return the corrected proofs to the Editor, by airmail where necessary, within ten days of receiving them.
8. Correction should be kept to an absolute minimum. It should be confined to errors of the typist or printer unless the Editor authorises otherwise.
9. All contributors of articles receive 50 free offprints. Reviewers will receive five or more offprints of their reviews.
10. If rejected manuscripts are to be returned, stamps or international coupons should be sent to cover postage, but it would normally be simpler just to retain a copy.
11. Contributors of accepted articles will be asked to assign their copyrights, on certain conditions, to Cambridge University Press, to help protect their material, particularly in the USA.
