A Bibliography of Sir William Petty
F.R.S. and of
Observations on the Bills of Mortality
by John Graunt
F.R.S.

SIR GEOFFREY KEYNES

Sir William Petty and Dr John Graunt, two early Fellows of the Royal Society, are remembered as the twin originators of political economy and medico-social statistics. Petty wrote many books; Graunt only one: therefore this bibliography is mainly taken up with annotated descriptions of Petty's books, the products of his extraordinary mental agility ranging over very many fields. Aubrey's accounts of the two men, and Evelyn's appreciation of Petty, are included. 2 plates 11 facsimiles of title pages £5.50

Marcello Malpighi and the Evolution of Embryology

HOWARD B. ADELMANN

'A truly monumental and magnificent work. It is in fact inexhaustible. Like the historic texts of embryology which are here opened up in full with translations and commentaries Adelmann's work should live forever whilst the traditional history books and monographs are bound to fall into oblivion'.

Machina Carnis

The Biochemistry of Muscular Contraction in its Historical Development

DOROTHY NEEDHAM F.R.S.

An account of the centuries of experimentation and speculation that have led to our present understanding of how muscles work.

This book traces all the developments in the field since 1600 and devotes special attention to the breakthroughs made in this century. The nature of the muscle as a machine, and its fuel, is considered as well as the intricate regulation of energy supply under different conditions. It also examines the very varied kinds of muscle and the effects of some diseases on their structure and function.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

The Manufacture of Madness

A Comparative Study of the Inquisition and the Mental Health Movement

THOMAS S. SZASZ, Professor of Psychiatry, State University of New York, Syracuse. Why, in the seventeenth century, did a persecutory mass-movement crystallize around the concept of madness? What has been the effect on psychiatry? Dr. Szasz displays the forms in which the perennial scapegoat principle manifests itself in the modern world and its function in the moral metabolism of society. 416 pp. £3.50

The Trade in Lunacy

A Study of Private Madhouses in England in the Eighteenth and Nineteenth Centuries

WILLIAM LL. PARRY-JONES, Department of Psychiatry, University of Oxford. The private madhouse—operated for profit—made an important contribution before complete public responsibility was taken for pauper lunatics. The author seeks to redress the bias against these occasionally infamous institutions with an objective appraisal of their functioning.

Studies in Social History 384 pp £4.75

The Sociology of Mental Disorder

ROGER BASTIDE, Director of Studies in Social Psychiatry, the Sorbonne; translated by Jean McNeil. The point of view is that, although neurosis and psychosis are always individual phenomena, a given society can magnify the morbid tendencies of its members and create situations that increase the numbers of mentally ill people. Conversely, the behaviour of the sick person affects the social units to which he belongs. 278 pp £3.00

The Scope of Child Analysis

VICTOR SMIRNOFF, Director, the Mental Hygiene Clinic, Paris; foreword by M. Masud R. Khan; translated from the French by Stephen Corrin. 'The first comprehensive survey of the field of child psychoanalysis . . . Covers an astonishing range of work, from that of René Spitz and Jacques Lacan, to D. W. Winnicott, Melanie Klein, and Anna Freud . . .'

—The Times Educational Supplement. 248 pp £3.00

Clio Medica

Acta Academiae Internationalis Historiae Medicinae

CLIO MEDICA provides the channel of communication for a world wide network of people interested in establishing a medical historiography of a high standard of scholarship. It aims to integrate the research of medical historians on an international plane and thereby to contribute towards a better understanding of the development of world wide medicine.

The journal's field of interest embraces all epochs of medicine, all aspects of medical activity, and medical institutions in the whole range of their respective cultural, religious and social implications. Contributions are invited and may be presented in English, French, German, Italian, Russian or Spanish. The journal handles only original articles whose conclusions have been reached through a use of methods, criticism and knowledge of modern medico-historical research.

CLIO MEDICA publishes information concerning the most important events of international medico-historical activity. A special "News and Notes" section illuminates projects such as the establishment of new museums, medico-historical institutes and societies, and the proceedings of national or international congresses etc. Authoritative and constructively-critical bookreviews of the most important new books in the field of medical history are also included.
