Amnesty for Crime in International Law and Practice

by Andreas O'Shea

This book contains a comprehensive and well-researched study of the relationship between municipal amnesty laws and developing principles of international criminal law. It pursues a path towards defining criteria for reconciling these two delicate fields of transitional justice. It concludes with a concrete proposal for the international community of states.

Max Planck Yearbook of United Nations Law – Volume 6, 2002

edited by Jochen A. Frowein & Rüdiger Wolfrum

Assistant Editor: Christiane E. Philipp

Now in its sixth year, the Max Planck Yearbook of United Nations Law has become a much sought-after forum for essays in international law related to the UN. This new volume contains essays on the UNESCO Convention on Underwater Cultural Heritage, ITLOS and its first six years, and the International Criminal Court. The status of the Taliban under International Law and current questions of submarine warfare are also subject of analysis.

The Multinational Enterprise and Legal Control

Host State Sovereignty in an Era of Economic Globalization

by Cynthia Day Wallace

Wallace applies herself to the legal and pragmatic aspects of control surrounding MNE operations. The primary focus is on legal and administrative techniques and measures practiced by host states to control - transparently or less so - foreign MNE activity within their territories, or even extraterritorially when effects are felt within national boundaries. The primary geographic focus is the six most investment-intensive industrialized states (namely, Canada, France, Germany, Japan, the United States and the United Kingdom). At the same time an important message of the present study is precisely the implications for the developing countries as well as for the emerging market economies of central and eastern Europe - and even Asian nations besides Japan, because it is the sharing of this very 'experience of years' that can best serve to facilitate a fuller participation on the part of the up-and-coming economies in the same global market place.

Conflict and Cooperation on South Asia's International Rivers

by Salman M.A. Salman & Kishor Uprety

This book focuses on the hydro-politics and legal regime of international water in the Sub-continent. It discusses the bilateral treaty regimes between India and Pakistan, India and Nepal, and India and Bangladesh over some of the major shared rivers between them. The book also provides an overview of main issues and common elements regarding shared rivers among those countries.

How to Complain to the UN Human Rights Treaty System

By Anne F. Bayefsky

This volume is about access and empowerment. It will facilitate the ability of victims to complain about violations of their rights to an international body, and to have their complaints measured against clear standards. Although this system of enforcement remains open only to those whose rights have been violated by states that have permitted complaints, the complaints procedures of the UN treaty system apply to one-quarter of the world's population.

The Security Council and the Protection of Human Rights

By Bertrand G. Ramcharan

How is the Security Council dealing with human rights imperatives? What does it see as the place of human rights in conflict prevention, peacemaking, peacekeeping and peacebuilding? How does it address the quest for justice in the face of gross violations of human rights? These and other similar questions are addressed in this book, the first of its kind on the human rights role of the Security Council in the post cold-war world. It is a compelling account of the human rights dimensions of the work of the Security Council.

A Global Law of Jurisdiction and Judgment: Lessons from the Hague

edited by John J. Barceló III & Kevin M. Clermont

The papers in this volume address the provisions of the 1999 Hague Jurisdiction and Judgments Draft Convention and the state of the negotiations as of the summer of 2000. They were presented at the symposium "A Global Law of Jurisdiction and Judgments: Lessons from The Hague," held in July 2000 at the Centre Panthéon (University of Paris I Law Faculty) as a part of the Cornell-Paris I Summer Institute of International and Comparative Law. Part I focuses on the jurisdiction provisions of the 1999 Draft Convention. For the most part, the papers in Part II look to the future, though they also deal briefly with the judgments provisions of the 1999 Draft. This volume provides critical analyses of the Draft Convention and should appeal to any private international lawyer.

New from OXFORD

International Criminal Law

ANTONIO CASSESE

This new book by Antonio Cassese provides a clear and concise account of the principles governing international crimes and an outline of international criminal trials. Adopting a combination of the classic common law and more theoretical approaches to the subject, it expounds the fundamentals of both substantive and procedural international criminal law, providing a theoretical framework to all the rules, principles, concepts, and legal constructs key to the subject.

The Responsibility of States for International Crimes

NINA H. B. JØRGENSEN

This book focuses on the concept of state responsibility for international crimes, which gained support following the First World War, but was pushed into the background by the development of the principle of individual criminal responsibility under international law after the Second World War. Jorgensen considers the history and merits of a concept that, it is argued, is currently on the threshold between lex ferenda and lex lata.

The Competing Jurisdictions of International Courts and Tribunals

YUVAL SHANY

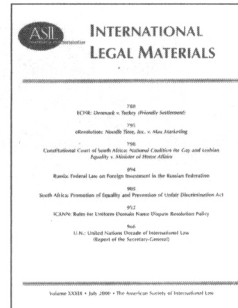

The proliferation of new international courts and tribunals in recent years has given rise to concerns of jurisdictional overlaps between the new and existing judicial bodies. The book examines what would happen when the same dispute falls under the jurisdiction of more than one forum. This raises both theoretical and practical issues of coordinating between the various jurisdictions and identifies rules of law which ought to apply in such circumstances.

New Titles from Transnational Publishers

GLOBAL LAW: A Triple Challenge

By Mireille Delmas-Marty (Naomi Norberg, trans.)

The author addresses the question whether globalization of law is possible in a world full of tensions due to an increase in economic inequality and the rise of national and regional differences. She questions whether it is reasonable to have an organized set of norms when the helter-skelter proliferation of norms and the displacement of landmarks create instead the impression of normative disorder? And finally, she asks whether the globalization of law is ethically desirable, when none of our international institutions are currently able to guarantee respect for democratic values?

2003. 200 pages. Price: $40.00/hardcover.

HUMAN RIGHTS IN AFRICA: Enhancing Human Rights Through the African Regional Human Rights System

By George William Mugwanya

This volume examines the prospect of an African regional human rights system as a means to foster the realization of establishing universal human rights norms in Africa. The author argues that although the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the role the United Nations plays in promoting global awareness of human rights has had a positive influence in Africa, their institutional, financial and political impediments undercut the ability of a global system to address adequately the crisis in human rights violations occurring in Africa today.

2003. 500 pages. Price: $135.00/hardcover.

ACCOUNTABILITY FOR ATROCITIES: National and International Responses

Edited by Jane Stromseth

This new book examines critical challenges in achieving accountability for genocide, crimes against humanity, and war crimes. It focuses in particular on the relationship between national and international accountability mechanisms in pursuing key goals over the past decade. While national and international responses to atrocities can be complementary—as the Rome Statute of the ICC envisions—challenges will arise in navigating the relationship between those efforts and in developing effective domestic mechanisms that meet unique goals and needs in different countries.

2003. 350 pages. Price: $125.00/hardcover.

GLOBALIZATION AND CORPORATE GOVERNANCE IN DEVELOPING COUNTRIES: A Micro Analysis of Global Corporate Interconnection Between Developing African Countries and Developed Countries

By Boniface Ahunwan

This book analyzes the dynamics of global corporate interconnection between developing countries and developed countries through cross-border securities transaction such as, cross-border listing of securities, cross-border mergers and takeovers. Particularly, the book examines the effects of such corporate interconnection on corporate governance in developing countries and the developed countries, such as the U.S., with which they interconnect.
